GERMANY REPORTS LAST OF THE RUSSIAN DIVISIONS ON MOSCOW FRONT ENCIRCLED

Civilians Join in Desperate Defense of the Capital

Red Army Faces Grave Situation, Soviet Statement To Public Says

People Urged To "Strain Every Effort To Repulse the New Attacks of the Enemy"

MOSCOW, Oct. 9 (AP)—Russian civilians joined the outnumbered Red army of the center tonight in a desperate effort to break the blunt German wedges advancing on Moscow with ever-increasing strength.

In deep forests and broad plains more than 100 miles west of the capital and 200-odd miles to the south these mighty Nazi offensives were met with new Soviet lines.

After retreating from Orel, an important railway junction south of Moscow, Marshal Semyon Timoshenko's forces occupied fresh positions north of the town and stubbornly sought there to breast the oncoming onslaughts of German tank columns.

Contest Second Advance
About Vyazma to the west of Moscow the Russians were bitterly contesting the second Nazi advance.

The situation behind the Red army lines remained calm and orderly so far as could be learned, and life in Moscow went on as usual.

But the position was clearly grave, although not disastrous.

To the almost limitless Russian millions the Soviet press appealed:

"Realize the gravity of the situation, the greatness of the danger and abandon all complacency. Strain every effort to repulse the new attacks of the impudent enemy."

"Every Red Army man must realize the gravity of the present moment."

Reds Admit Reverse
That moment was grave indeed, for the mid-day communiqué of the Soviet command acknowledged that the German offensives—the greatest of all the war—had not been checked. Although the invaders were declared falling by the thousands, their lines grew only longer, for fresh German divisions after division were being hurled into every hard-pressed Russian point.

The fighting proceeded with an epic savagery about Vyazma, and near Orel, where the Russians made perhaps their greatest stand in attempting to block the Nazis' northern push. Bryansk, to the west, was immediately outanked.

Orel itself was finally lost to the Germans after a three-day battle in which the town changed hands three times. First, said Soviet dispatches, the Russians abandoned it under heavy attack; then stormed and recaptured it and at last withdrew in the face of overwhelming numbers.

Violent Action in South
There was wild and violent action too in the far south along the upper shores of the sea of Azov about Melitopol where a southern German offensive synchronized with the thrusts at the center was trying to beat its way eastward toward Rostov at the mouth of the river Don and at the gateway to the Soviet Caucasus.

The situation in this Ukrainian theater was not stated in detail. Here and there over the central (Continued on Page 2, Col. 4)

Coup Government Of Panama Will Back U. S. Policy

New Cabinet Plans To Reconsider Order of Fleeing Arias

PANAMA, Panama, Oct. 9 (AP)—A coup government quickly pledged to support democratic principles ousted Nazi-minded President Arnulfo Arias today and a member of the new cabinet said it was reconsidering Arias' order, issued just before he fled by plane to Cuba, banning guns on U. S. ships flying the flag of Panama.

The cabinet member said no action would be taken formally tonight, but added that some decision might be announced tomorrow.

The "no-guns" question, he said, would be "handled in the spirit of unselfish cooperation" which would characterize the new regime's attitude toward the United States.

Panama police quickly rounded up a number of Arias' followers suspected of pro-Axis sympathies and possible Fifth Column activities in this vital American defense area.

Among those arrested was Antonio Isaza, private secretary to the president and former Panamanian consul-general in Hamburg, Germany. Isaza was regarded as one of the most convinced Nazi sympathizers in Panama.

Film Executive Tells How Film Industry Prevented Strike

NEW YORK, Oct. 9 (AP)—Nicholas M. Schenck, film executive asserted under cross-examination in Federal Court today that George E. Browne, president of the International Alliance of Theatrical and Stage Employees (AFL), had settled a threatened New York City theater strike in 1935 at a cost of $100,000.

Schenck was the first government witness in the trial of Browne and Willie Bioff, West Coast labor leader, on charges of extorting $550,000 from four major film companies.

He said he was informed of the strike threat by Charles Moskowitz, general manager of Lowe's theaters in New York and brother of Joseph M. Moskowitz, who was convicted last April with Schenck's brother, Joseph M. Schenck, of income tax evasion.

Browne's End $100,000
Local 306 of the Motion Picture Projectors Union talked of calling a strike unless a new contract with higher wages was granted. Schenck said, and Moskowitz appealed to Browne to intervene. Schenck quoted Moskowitz as saying that Browne had declared the strike talk could be ended but that "our end of it will cost $100,000."

The witness said that as president of Lowe's Inc., he told Moskowitz "for God's sake do the best you can but don't close up the theaters."

So that the payment would appear in order on the company's books, Schenck said, a man from Chicago named Mort Singer was employed and paid $100,000 by check. Under questioning by George E. Breslin of Los Angeles, a member of counsel for Bioff, Schenck denied that he was aware of a close friendship between his brother and Bioff or that he had sent Christmas cards to Bioff since 1936.

No Calls to Bioff
He also denied that he had made many long distance telephone calls to Bioff's California home between 1936 and 1938, or that he had arranged with Bioff to call the labor leader "Mr. Link" in the telephone conversations.

Earlier, Schenck testified that he and another executive tossed $100,000 (Continued on Page 2, Col. 1)

Fairfield Plant Again Operating With Aid of CIO

SWOC Sends Members into Mills through AFL Picket Lines

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Oct. 9 (AP)—All major units of the Giant Fairfield Steel Works resumed operations tonight as the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Company announced the mills would be kept open and the CIO Steel Workers Organizing Committee sent its members through AFL picket lines.

There was no official word on the number of employees at work.

Noel Beddow, SWOC executive director, said spokesmen, however, forecast that "the whole TCI operation in Birmingham will be down by Saturday night."

Plant Is Defense Cog
The plant, a vital cog in the south's defense program, was closed shortly after midnight today by a walkout of AFL machinists and electricians, who struck in protest against car inspections by the Steel Workers Organization Committee (CIO).

The CIO line was withdrawn today, but AFL pickets paraded at the gates with placards reading "AFL on strike protecting CIO wildcat lockout."

P. M. McGathy, president of the Electrical Workers Local, said the CIO inspection line refused to allow AFL members to enter the plant, and attempted to force them to join the SWOC.

Early efforts to settle differences between the unions failed when an informal joint committee adjourned without recommendations.

Non-Essential Building Curb Left to Board

Priorities Unit Takes Right To Forbid Construction of Homes

Local Agencies Asked Not To Issue Building Permits

By WILLIAM NEEDHAM

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9 (AP)—Invoking unparalleled veto power over the $11,000,000,000 construction industry, the Supply Priorities and Allocation Board prohibited today the start of any non-essential public or private construction which would divert vital materials from the defense effort.

SPAB issued a policy ruling that projects which it deemed unnecessary to "direct national defense," public health or safety would be barred for the duration of the emergency from "priorities" on such vital materials as steel, copper, bronze, aluminum and brass.

"Priorities" is a system under which materials are rationed out, first to defense industry and then, if the supply is not exhausted, to civilian uses.

Scrap under Control
Coincidentally, Donald M. Nelson, OPM priorities director, and SPAB executive director, ordered iron and steel scrap placed under full priorities control, effective Saturday.

Further evidencing a sudden spurt of defense activity, it was learned that "a crack down" on misuse of aluminum priorities was pending. An unidentified Chicago manufacturer was ordered here for a hearing on charges he obtained "a considerable quantity" of aluminum by using defense preference rating, then disposed of the metal for non-defense purposes.

An assertion that the curb on construction would throw 4,500,000 men out of work came from M. W. Watson, president of the Associated General Contractors of America. In a statement, he estimated that 1,500,000 would be out of work on non-defense construction and that an additional 3,000,000 engaged in production, marketing and shipment of "non-critical" materials would be idle.

Doubts Step Is Necessary
"If this drastic blow to the construction industry is fully justified," he said, "the construction industry will accept it with the grace which any other American industry would. But the announcement by the Supply Priorities and Allocations Board does not reveal figures which justify such a drastic step."

SPAB's decision to take drastic action in the construction field leaves it the final veto power over items ranging from postoffices, new homes and court houses to the proposed $200,000,000 St. Lawrence seaway and all of the other 150-odd projects in the pending House Rivers and Harbors bill. SPAB officials said each project would be weighed on the basis of two questions: whether the construction involves use of appreciable quantities of vital (Continued on Page 2, Col. 2)

Under Secretary of War Points Out That Times Have Changed

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Oct. 9 (AP)—Critics' claims that the United States is building a mass army on the basis of experience in the first World war were denied tonight by Robert P. Patterson, under secretary of war.

"Those who level that charge," he said in a speech prepared for delivery before the state Chamber of Commerce, "seem to be unaware of the fact that nearly one-fifth of our army will be in the air force."

He added that of the divisions that fight on the ground one out of six will be a division whose principal weapon is the tank, and the time will come when our entire army will move on automotive equipment.

Seven-Day Test of Power To Repel Air Raids Gets under Way

By EDWARD O. ETHELL

BALTIMORE, Oct. 9 (AP)—A husky Irish sergeant leans over a multi-colored checkerboard to help a young Jew and a determined Dutch haus frau adjust a pawn—and America's most vital defense machine goes into action.

In the milling mob around them is a man who should have a Stradivarius in place of the telephone under his chin; a club woman, pusher in hand and glasses hooked determinedly on her aristocratic nose; a worn housewife, giving more of her life for the things she holds dear; an enthusiastic youngster, bouncing around like a bull in the proverbial china shop.

They are but a small part of the 200 volunteers manning the Baltimore filter unit in four hour shifts from 6 a. m. to 6 p. m. in the seven day tests of effectiveness of the Eastern seaboard defense against air raids which opened today.

Red Armies in Danger

While they were reporting that there was no panic or any sign of one in Moscow, the British press warned the public with a unanimity that might have been inspired that Russia's armies are in the gravest of danger but must be aided to the utmost.

Admiral William Harrison Standley of the U. S. mission said he believed that if the Germans took Moscow the Russians were fully prepared to move their lines back and continue the fight.

"The Germans may have temporary successes," he said, "but I don't think they will discourage the Russians. The morale of the Russian people surprised me. They are standing up to the strain much better than I expected."

Immediate Aid Needed

Immediate aid from Britain and America, it was indicated, will be in expanded supplies. Responsible sources could offer no real hope for the reopening of a western land front on Britain's initiative.

London sources said the Germans seemed to be trying to establish an ultimate line from Archangel to Astrakhan, putting the richest and most productive part of Russia in their hands and blocking supplies (Continued on Page 2, Col. 8)

Crushing Defeat Of Soviet Army Claimed in Nazi Story of Battle

Spokesman for Hitler Proclaims "Setting of the Soviet Star"; Three Units Trapped

BERLIN, Oct. 9 (AP)—The German high command declared tonight that the last fully effective Russian armies remaining on the whole of the eastern front were now fatally encircled in two areas along the center before Moscow, and Adolf Hitler's military spokesmen formally proclaimed the setting of the Soviet star.

The great victory which Hitler in a special order of the day had called "the most essential condition for peace" had now been attained, these authorities asserted.

While there still was much bloody fighting to come, they added, "the military decision has fallen."

Three Red Armies Encircled

Three Red armies officially declared as without any leadership were reported facing destruction in the region of Bryansk—about 220 miles below Moscow—along with other units entrapped about Vyazma, some 125 miles west of the capital.

A Russian division at full strength numbers about 20,000 men, and on the basis of Nazi figures it was stated that the total number of Red troops put out of action might be as high as 140,000. But only after final operations could a definite figure be given, it was added, and in this connection one commentator remarked that some Russian divisions of late had been found to aggregate only some hundreds, and not thousands, of men.

Hitler's order to the troops, which had been issued at the beginning of the great offensive on Oct. 2, was given to the German people for the first time today while the radio resounded with reports of successes for German arms.

Takes Snap at England
"Today," he had said, "begins the last great decisive battle of this year. It will hit this enemy destructively and with it the instigator of the entire war, England herself."

"For if we crush this opponent we also remove the last English ally on the continent."

"Thus we will free the German Reich and all Europe from a menace greater than any since the time of the Huns and later of the Mongol tribes."

"The German people therefore will be with you more than ever before during the few ensuing weeks. What you and allied soldiers have achieved already merits our deepest thanks."

Asks Divine Aid
"With bated breath, the blessing of the entire German homeland accompanies you during the hard days ahead. With the Lord's aid you not only will bring victory but also the most essential condition for peace."

Authorized persons described the Soviet disaster tonight as one of such magnitude that there is no longer an effective Russian military leadership.

Asked whether there were still unified Soviet commands, these informants responded:

"There are no commands of any kind."

Legality of Warrant for Arrest Of Road Gang Prisoner Doubled

Judge To Rule on Return of Raymond Faris to Virginia

HARRISBURG, Pa., Oct. 9 (AP)—The legality of a warrant for the arrest of Raymond B. Faris, fugitive from a Virginia road gang, was attacked today in Federal court in that Attorney Judson E. Ruch said it was the first test of its kind in the history of American law.

Walter Rogers, counsel for the state of Virginia, contended the extradition papers were in order and return of the prisoner to answer a charge of escape.

Basis of Case

Administration Accused of Lack Of Candor in Lease-Lend Fight

Rep. Ditter Says People Want Facts about Preparedness

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9 (AP)—Republicans accused the administration today of an "amazing lack of candor" and an unwillingness to disclose "cold, hard facts" about the progress of the defense program as the House debated the $5,985,000,000 Lend-Lease bill.

Immediately after Rep. Woodrum (D-Va.) in a fifty-minute speech told the House that the nation was making an industrial effort almost on a war basis, Rep. Ditter (R-Pa.)

arose to assert that "Hitler is better informed than the American people" about the extent of this country's preparedness.

Ditter Asks "Frankness"

"What the American people want to know is how well we are prepared to fight right now," he said. "We have had phrases rather than frankness."

Then Rep. Engel (R-Mich.) called attention to the present federal debt and announced that he would vote on the bill just as people would vote "back home" on a bond issue under similar circumstances.

Japan Approaches New Crisis with U. S. Government

Military Group May Oust Konoye from Control of Empire

By GLENN BABB
Associated Press Staff Writer

Japan is moving toward a new crisis in her relations with the United States which may wreck her present government, place the empire's destinies more completely in military hands and open a new phase of her program of conquest, according to trustworthy advisers reaching the Associated Press in New York.

War Peril Growing

The Japanese have felt that for the last six weeks there has been an encouraging truce in the long-drawn steadily-worsening friction with America. They date the truce from the delivery late in August of a personal message from Premier Fumimaro Konoye to President Roosevelt. They indicate that hopes they placed in that gesture have been disappointed and that the truce is nearing an end. They blame American unreadiness to match that gesture of conciliation.

Konoye May Fall

Japanese leaders fear a break with the United States is impending. Konoye has let it be known that he will not accept responsibility if this comes. His effort to come to some sort of understanding, even a temporary and superficial one, with America fails, if there is not early improvement in trans-Pacific relations, the Konoye cabinet will fall.

It will be replaced by one of generals and admirals or at least one even more under the domination of the "Greater East Asia" Axis-bound military clique than ever before. Names of likely successors to Konoye already are being discussed, among them General Hiroshi Minami, who was war minister when the program of conquest began in Manchuria ten years ago, and others of like background.

Legality of

arrest was part of a plan to return Paris to Virginia "where the same treatment would ensue."

"Neither of these two questions has ever been decided in the history of American law," Ruch declared.

Paris testified for nearly half an hour on conditions at the road camp and his escape. He told the court prisoners were given food "unfit for human consumption," were linked to a long chain at night and forced to work approximately twelve hours a day.

The prisoner said he had been punished for not working hard enough by being forced to stand with his hands shackled to a rafter for two hours a day on five consecutive days.

Testimony Denied

William S. Brent, captain of guards at the Richmond penitentiary, disputed most of Paris's testimony.

"Food, he said, was prepared by qualified persons and 'compares favorably with the food in any camp in the country.'"

"Corporal punishment which is inflicted by means of a flat strap," the captain said, was authorized in Virginia. But, he added, "it is only used in cases of last resort," for "persistent refusals to work or obey, or violence toward another prisoner."

Judge Johnson allowed Rogers ten days to file written briefs and promised a decision later.

to grievance with the company, "but we are weary of death of CIO wildcat strikes." The AFL unions warned the CIO two weeks ago that their members would strike if another CIO inspection line was established.

Meanwhile, the steel situation here was further complicated tonight by a strike of United Mine Workers of America (CIO) in TCI's Edgewater and Hamilton mines.

William Mitch, UMW district president, said the walkout was unauthorized, and he would attempt to get the 3,000 idle miners back on their jobs tomorrow. He said the miners walked out because of the long delay in negotiating a permanent contract covering the Alabama coal fields.

Coup Government

Rodriguez, a presidential secretary, and Enrique Linares, senior manager of the national lottery.

A number of Panama police officials were said to have fled.

Arias fled by plane to Columbia Tuesday, soon after the "no-guns" order of last Monday complicated the neutrality law repeal debate in Washington, and proceeded from there to Havana, where he was located today.

President Three Hours

The second vice-president of Panama, the first eligible successor to Arias who could be reached immediately, was sworn in as president. For three hours he headed an interim government in probably the shortest term ever.

Then the cabinet he formed called in Ricardo Adolfo De La Guardia, justice minister and physician of pronounced pro-democratic leanings, and handed him the presidency.

Officially, the new government issued a manifesto pledging "decided support for democratic principles now menaced throughout the world and affecting in a very marked manner the Republic of Panama because she is situated at the epicenter of Continental defense."

Arias Is Surprised

In Havana, where Arias arrived under his mother's name, "A. Madrid," the displaced president said he was greatly surprised at his ouster and insisted he had come to Cuba merely to see an eye doctor, expecting to return.

He said he wanted to go back but as a non-political figure, insisted he was not pro-Nazi but "pro-Panama," and told reporters to draw their own conclusions as to whether the gun-banning decree for U. S. ships had anything to do with his being deposed.

The Panama Supreme Court order which first replaced him said he had "absented himself suddenly from the country, leaving vacant the post he had held" and that it was not possible to learn his whereabouts.

Non-Essential

materials and whether it is necessary to national defense, public health or safety.

If the answer is "yes" to the first and "no" to the second, priorities ratings for the materials involved will not be issued.

If construction is under way now substantially completed, the SPAB ruling said, efforts would be made to obtain materials to finish the job.

Appeal to Local Agencies

To facilitate operation of the policy, SPAB urged federal, state and local government agencies to refrain from issuing permits or other authorizations for work on which priorities would later be denied. It also suggested that building codes in many cities, requiring use of excessive amounts of vital materials, be suspended during the emergency.

It was estimated that 1941 construction would total about $11,000,000,000, of which about $6,300,000,000 would represent non-defense work employing approximately 1,500,000 workers.

OPM's assumption of priorities control over iron and steel scrap—needed in steel manufacture—resulted from a situation that threatened to shut down or curtail operations of steel mills working at full capacity on defense orders, Nelson said. He added the action was designed to relieve serious day-to-day shortages and authorizes the priorities director to issue specific directions for scrap delivery, covering the "source, destination, or amount of scrap to be delivered or acquired" by any consumer.

Administration

said that "of course" there had been "delays x x x disappointments x x x failures."

"You can not, unfortunately, go down to Sears Roebuck and Company or Montgomery Ward and buy airplanes and tanks."

"If we start a tank or a plane to help the democracies, we are going to see to it if we can—and I think we can—that the plane and tank actually gets on the battle line to help stop Hitler if it is possible to do so."

Hard Fight Predicted

Then, anticipating the hardest fight that will come on the bill tomorrow—the question of denying Russia any benefits from the appropriation—Woodrum expressed the personal hope that "a sizable amount" of Lend-Lease material could be made available to that nation.

"I have no more love for Communism than you have," he said. "I do not like a rattlesnake and I am not going to get close to one if I can help it, but if I could get hold of one of them and had a fair opportunity, I would like to slip it up the pants leg of Adolf Hitler."

An amendment to bar aid to Russia has been prepared by Representative Day (D-Ill.) after disposing of this issue tomorrow, leaders hope to push the bill quickly to final passage.

Lindbergh Kin Favors Repeal Of Neutrality

And Herbert Agar Wants War at Once, He Tells Meeting

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9 (P)—Augustus F. Lindbergh, half cousin of the flier, and Herbert Agar, editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal, were applauded today by the "Continental Congress for Freedom" when the first advocated repeal of the Neutrality Act and the latter, "war—preferably tomorrow."

Sitting directly in front of the speakers was Mrs. Dwight Morrow, mother-in-law of Charles A. Lindbergh. Like Augustus Lindbergh, she disagrees with the flier's views on foreign policy.

She is a delegate from New Jersey to the two-day Continental Congress, which is sponsored by the Fight for Freedom committee and is attended by delegates from the forty-eight states.

Agar Wants War

Agar would get into the war by creating an aggressive attitude on the part of the people that would uphold a decisive action by the administration. Such a decisive action, he said, would be to send the American merchant fleet, conveyed by the American navy, "straight into British harbors." Hitler would have to fight back, he said.

That would be the same decisive act as Lincoln took in sending boats to Fort Sumter, he added. If Lincoln had stopped to ask Congress if it wanted Civil war, he wouldn't have got ten votes, Agar explained, just as today if the administration asked Congress to go to war it would be turned down.

Sees Boost in Morale

America's boost into the war would boost morale among the conquered people and really put this nation to work producing day and night, he asserted. He said this country has the world's greatest navy and the greatest armed force. Troops, he continued, could be landed in the near east where the war might be decided.

Agar expressed hope that the Continental Congress would pass resolutions that would force the war issue. He was named chairman of the Resolutions committee on which are serving Mrs. Morrow, Mrs. Melvin Douglas, actress, President James B. Conant of Harvard University and others.

Augustus Lindbergh, Birmingham, Ala., attorney told the gathering "I find that all the people who think like you do. But there a lot of people who don't think."

Sees Group Aiding Hitler

He said "there is a group going about the country fighting Hitler's battle" and he described the retention of all the neutrality law as in Germany's interest.

Agar, Pulitzer prize winner and for many years foreign correspondent, said this country should go to war at once, and that he meant "war in three letters not in three paragraphs."

The Continental Congress was opened by the Right Rev. Henry W. Hobson, Cincinnati, Episcopal bishop of Southern Ohio, who said "the moment has come when we must fight for our freedom or lose it."

Lax Discipline By Officers Is Stressed in N. C.

Fell Out during Maneuvers, General Fredendall Charges

WADESBORO, N. C., Oct. 9 (P)—Lax discipline by officers was criticized today by General Lloyd R. Fredendall, second army corps commander, in a critique of the first phase of large-scale southern maneuvers in which the Twenty-ninth division composed of Maryland, Virginia, District of Columbia and Pennsylvania troops is participating.

At his headquarters, General Fredendall said the "officers set a poor example for the men, falling out Monday morning when they could have kept going. Weekend bellywash and a hot sun don't mix."

After the critique, Twenty-ninth division officers left to bivouac twenty-five miles south and move tonight against the "enemy" Twenty-eighth division entrenched south-east of Wadesboro.

Maj.-Gen. Milton A. Reckord, Twenty-ninth division commander, and Lieut.-Gen. Hugh Drum, commander of the First army, also commented at the critique.

Officers agreed that the Twenty-ninth division had made a better showing than at the Virginia maneuvers and said the division's most glaring defeat was its "inability to move as a unit of the Second Army Corps."

Two Suspects Held in Miley Slaying

FORT WORTH, Tex., Oct. 9 (P)—Detective Captain A. E. Dowell said tonight that two suspects in the slaying of Marion Miley, prominent golf star and the fatal wounding of her mother, Mrs. Fred Miley, at Lexington, Ky., were under arrest here and would be returned immediately to Kentucky.

INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

Germany's boast that Russian power of organized resistance has been shattered "from the springs of the Volga to the Sea of Azov" may be premature; but there is enough grim reality in that Nazi-drawn picture to justify foreboding.

From the source of the Volga to the Sea of Azov is a thousand miles, as the crow flies. The Volga rises on slopes of the Valdai hills, nearly 200 miles northwest of Moscow. It empties into the Caspian Sea 2,000 miles and more from its springs, looping far eastward of Moscow on its way south.

Upper Volga Key Point

There are indications that Hitler hopes to hurl the Russians back beyond the river within a few weeks if not days. It is by no means certain that German forces are not already on the upper Volga. Hitler has asserted that a large number of Russians have been encircled at Vyazma, which is some seventy miles due south of Rjev on the Volga. It still seems possible that the Nazi push to Vyazma came from the north, via Veliki Luki and Rjev, as well as eastward from Smolensk. If so Moscow is menaced from Rjev down another spoke of the far-flung wheel of railroads and highways which converge from all directions on the Kremlin.

The outer rim of that wheel, on which Russian defense of Moscow was rebuilt after the fall of the Stalin line on the Dnieper, is already broken. Along several routes from the west, north and south, Hitler's troops and war machines have driven forward with giant strides.

Every western spoke of the Moscow communications web is involved. In desperate fighting north of fallen Orel a southern approach to the city is at stake, probably the best approach for German use for a double rail system connects Orel to Moscow through Tula. If the Nazis also take or have taken, Tula, they will have broken also the inner rim of the Moscow defense wheel.

Nazi Position Improved

There is another grave danger for the Russians in the loss of Orel. By whatever route German forces reached that city, they are now in a position to lash southward down the Moscow-Khar'kov-Rostov railway. That would take Russian defenders of Khar'kov in the rear.

The badly battered Red army of the Ukraine could again be caught in a great encirclement trap as it was east of Kiev.

There is little of a special nature from Moscow to offset German insistence that the whole struggle is all but over, with only mopping-up actions to follow. It should be recalled, however, that the Russians have come through previous disasters in this war to fight again on new fronts.

The wear and tear on Nazi troops and the strain on ever-extending German communication lines are factors that cannot be ignored in calculating the possibilities.

Southward, however, there seems less hope that the Donets Basin and the Rostov key to Russian oil sources can be held. That is the weakest link in the Russian defense chain, even discounting Nazi claims of utter Red army collapse.

Crushing Defeat

of all European Russian armies was imminent, an authoritative person acknowledged that no one could say whether the Soviet union would be able to set up new forces during the coming winter.

"However," he added "no Russian army could be dangerous to the German forces for more than two weeks. A small German force consisting of tanks, motorized units and, not the least, the German air force, could attack and destroy it in short order."

He acknowledged that there were wide expanses of Soviet territory yet to be occupied, but insisted that the areas vital to the Soviet war machine already were in German hands.

Conceding that Stalin might withdraw and set up a new front, he asserted this would have value only for propaganda purposes.

Supporting Hitler's declaration that Russia would be crushed before the onset of winter, German sources summed up that the Nazis now had broken Marshal Semeon Timoshenko's defense at the center, had penetrated deep into the Ukraine and to the shores of the Azov Sea leading to the Caucasus, and had bottled up Marshal Klement Vorshilov's defenders of Leningrad.

Over the Bryansk encirclement tonight hundreds of German battle planes and dive bombers were reported beating at the entrapped Russians and completely confusing the Russian defense.

All Rosy, Nazis Feel

The situation as seen through German eyes was so rosy that military spokesmen asserted there was nothing that either Russia or her friends could do.

The military sensation of all the day's sensations was the announcement of the entrapped of the cream of Timoshenko's armies about Bryansk, formed by powerful German forces which had made a swift thrust to the east and then swung about to attack the Russians from the rear.

How many of Timoshenko's troops remained outside of these rings and still able to stand on the Moscow approaches was not stated. There was no hint whatever that there would be any immediate drive on Moscow.

It was noted, however, that Hitler's exhortation to his soldiers had said that the foe's three chief industrial areas would be in German hands in a few weeks. These are commonly accepted as the Leningrad and Moscow districts and the Donets river basin in the Ukraine.

Also possibly significant was Hitler's statement that extensive conquered areas already were under civil administrations.

The fuhrer himself, in his order prepared before the most recent developments, thus summoned up the achievements of the German armies as of that time.

Hitler's War Claims

2,400,000 Russian prisoners taken; 17,500 Red tanks and more than 21,600 pieces of artillery destroyed or captured; 14,200 planes shot down or destroyed on ground.

Territory occupied more than twice the size of the German Reich of 1933 and "more than four times as large as the English motherland."

German casualties, he said, were "not yet five per cent of those of the World war."

Farmers Demand Congress Boost Prices at Once

Declare They Are Not Getting Their Share of Prosperity

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9, (P). A conference of farm leaders from thirty-seven states drafted resolutions tonight calling upon Congress to guarantee farmers higher prices than now prevail for many of their products.

Congressional proposals to freeze agricultural prices at present levels or to authorize the sixty-odd governors, state agricultural commissioners, officials of national farm organizations, and Congress members attending the conference.

Speaker after speaker, including Senators Bankhead (D-Ala.), Thomas (D-Okl.), Smith (D-SC), Gillette (D-Iowa), and Aiken (R-Vt.) took exception to contentions of some economists and government officials that rising farm prices were contributing to an inflationary movement.

No Inflation Danger

"There is no danger of inflated farm prices so long as we have surpluses and farmers produce abundantly," declared Bankhead.

All took the position that farm prices — now forty-five per cent higher than a year ago — still did not give farmers their share of prosperity created by national defense spending.

"Parity" prices have been defined by agriculture department officials as those which would give farm products as much purchasing power as those of non-farm goods and services as in a base period.

In determining parity price goals of its crop programs the department uses the pre-war years of 1909-14.

Urge Later Period

Senator Thomas and other speakers contended, however, that this period did not properly reflect present day farm production costs. They urged that a later period be used.

Senator Smith sharply attacked "government bureaucrats who don't know the difference between a cotton plant and jimson weed."

"Farmers are tired of being the football of politics," he declared.

Aiken said farmers should use "pressure methods" to get what they want.

Aluminum Company Freed of Charges

NEW YORK, Oct. 9 (P)—Federal Judge Francis G. Caffey today denied the government's petition for dissolution of the Aluminum Company of America and the so-called trust of which Alcoa and twenty-four corporate co-defendants were alleged to be members. The count also denied petitions for injunctions against any or all of the defendants named in the government's anti-trust suit.

"But," he added, "so did the Maginot line."

firmative defense of our rights to be annulled and diluted by sections of the Neutrality Act which have no realism in the light of unscrupulous ambition of madmen.

"We intend to maintain the security and integrity and the honor of our country."

"We intend to maintain this policy of protecting the freedom of the seas against domination by any foreign power which has become crazed with a desire to control the world. We shall do so with all our strength and all our heart and all our mind."

Congressional reaction to the message closely followed the already well-defined line of cleavage between the supporters and the opponents of his foreign policy.

Typical of the comment was this from Chairman Connally (D-Tex) of the Senate Foreign Relations committee:

"... A splendid and eloquent exposition of what American foreign policy should be."

And this, from Senator Taft (R-Ohio):

"Undeclared War, Says Taft

"A policy of carrying on an undeclared naval war on the Atlantic."

The receipt of the message found the House debating a $5,985,000,000 appropriation for the Lend-Lease program of helping Great Britain, with Rep. Woodrum (D-Va.) asserting that "we are going to see to it, if we can—and I think we can—that planes and tanks get on the battle line to be used against Hitler."

At the other end of the capital, the Senate Banking committee had just approved a $1,500,000 increase in the borrowing capacity of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, to be used in the defense drive, and it had heard the Federal Loan Administrator, Secretary of Commerce Jones, say he would be back for even more money in two or three months.

Hearings Start Monday

Meanwhile, administration leaders highly confident of enough votes to authorize the arming of American ships, at least, preceded with their plans for the legislation. Hearings before the House Foreign Affairs committee are to start on Monday, and some hope to have the bill through the house by the end of next week.

Then it will go to the Senate where an effort will be made in the Foreign Relations committee to add provisions repealing the restrictions on ship movements.

A drive is expected also to bring about the complete repeal of the law.

With what perhaps was a very thought at the fact that he signed the bill which he now would have reconsidered, the president said that under the circumstances and in the atmosphere in which it was passed the law "seemed reasonable."

"But," he added, "so did the Maginot line."

Not a Present From Santa Claus

WHAT this newspaper has stated on various occasions with regard to the expected cuts in state property and income taxes, namely, that they are the result of an adroit political maneuver which should fool nobody who can run and read, is corroborated by the Valley Register, of Middletown, as it has been corroborated by other state newspapers and leaders. The Valley Register mines no words in its characterization. "For some time past," it says, "the governor has been bragging about the huge surplus piled up in the state treasury—approximately $8,500,000 more than is needed for governmental purposes in Maryland. We have no desire to take any credit from Governor O'Connor for his actions, because during these days any news of a reduction in taxes is practically the same as a gift from Santa Claus. The people of Maryland are grateful for the proposed cut, but the brilliant glare on the eve of a campaign for reelection should not blind the vision of Maryland voters. Nor should the flashy gesture obscure simple facts, because the public should not be compelled to pay more taxes than are needed to run the state departments efficiently and economically, and we do not believe that Governor O'Connor has discovered any new methods of operating the government much more cheaply.

"The simple truth of the matter is that Governor O'Connor is able to announce a cut in the tax rates for the next two years because he and his Democratic legislature imposed tax rates that were higher than they should have been. In other words, the taxpayers of Maryland have been forced to pay not only the amounts needed for state functioning since the governor assumed office in 1938, but $8,500,000 in addition. The reductions, as announced by Governor O'Connor, therefore, are far from being presents from Santa Claus. They are merely a return of over-payments collected from the citizens of Maryland.

"Of course, we do not know what led the governor to impose higher taxes during the past three years than were necessary, but we do know that from the standpoint of political maneuvering, Mr. O'Connor must certainly feel that he stands to benefit greatly in his campaign for reelection, and it must be borne in mind that Mr. O'Connor is a politician in the strictest sense of the word. And, in all probability, his chief campaign slogan next year will be, 'I've given you substantial cuts in your tax rate!'

"To suggest that Governor O'Connor had such things in mind when he imposed excessive tax rates may be considered political propaganda, but to our mind, the citizens of Maryland would have been more grateful to him if he had held the tax rate down during the past three years, instead of now giving back what he over-collected."

Undoubtedly they would have been. But politics works in devious ways its wenders to perform and there is no discounting the fact that Governor O'Connor stands to profit by this clever, long and carefully planned scheme, and that the members of the opposition party will have to bestir themselves in order to counteract it among those voters who are most easily persuaded by demagogic campaign cries.

A New Sampling Of Legion Sentiment

A DEVELOPMENT in American Legion circles just reported out of Indianapolis will be watched with interest by the public in general in view of the action taken by its recent national convention regarding an American expeditionary force to Europe.

Articles of incorporation have been filed with the Indiana secretary of state for Legion Rank and File, an organization having as its purpose the obtaining of a referendum of Legion members on the question of sending American troops abroad.

"I do not believe," said Tod Whipple, of Portland, Ind., in filing the papers, "that the resolution passed at Milwaukee by our national convention, favoring an A. E. F. to Europe, reflected the true sentiments of the rank-and-file, dues-paying membership of the American Legion."

That convention adopted a resolution urging "removal of all geographic limitation on movement of forces" and declared "if fighting is necessary to defend the United States, we insist upon being prepared to do the fighting outside the United States."

There are some, of course, who can see a distinction here as between fighting outside the United States and being prepared to do it. At any rate, the reaction from the Legion Rank and File movement will be watched with interest in view of the respect commanded by the Legionnaires.

A Clarion Call That Needs Clarification

THE NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE, one of the most outspoken of the interventionists, publishes a slugged editorial designed to be a clarion call to the country. It is in three sections, one devoted to foreign policy, one to errors at home and one to the duty of the Republican party.

The first declares "the country is faced a grave issue in its foreign affairs and reached a final decision."

The second admits numerous blunders and sins of omission in domestic policy, many of which have impeded the defense program.

The third calls on the Republican party to unite behind the president in his foreign policy. But, just what it is the people have just now decided in finality, the esteemed Herald Tribune does not specify. The people have long since approved a huge defense program, lease-lend aid to Britain and its allies, and maintenance of defense in the Western Hemisphere. If that constitutes the sound foreign policy which the Herald Tribune means, all well and good.

But, there are mystery and doubt as to whether this represents the extent of the program of foreign policy. The Herald Tribune should have clarified that. The president, who can be given credit for having proceeded cautiously with respect to American public sentiment, should explain it if it has come to the point where a clarion call is now in order.

When this is done, when all doubt and uncertainty are resolved, the people will quickly make up their minds. But as the situation now rests, they are confused, and that confusion is increased when the New York newspaper suddenly blasts a clarion call for support without specifying the things it would have supported. If it means all out for shooting war, it should say so; and its editorial attitude for some time past has indicated that it deems that course the best. And that, of course, is something else again because millions hold to the belief that this nation can be of vastly more help to Britain and its allies by remaining out of the war.

The Risk in Extending Social Security

STUDIES which the administration made of social security at the time the law was adopted prepared it to give full weight to the risk it will run if it adds some 33,000,000 people to the 47,000,000 who are now covered. The plan, according to the president's announcement, is to extend both unemployment compensation and old age and survivor benefits.

He also indicated that more aid would be given to states which are unable to pay their share of other social security assistance. Under the law, farm, domestic and casual laborers are not covered, nor are employees of religious and educational institutions, of state and local government, the self-employed and the family-employed. All these would be blanketed in under the new plan.

At present the pay roll tax is two per cent, half paid by the employer, half by the employee. This yields about $1,000,000,000 a year to pay benefits and for the reserve, which goes into the federal treasury as an investment in government bonds. The rate automatically doubles January 1, 1943, and is to go to six per cent by 1949.

If the new plan is adopted the probability of higher rates than the present schedule calls for will be strong. Some members of Congress believe that the real purpose of the extension at this time is to levy a higher pay roll tax to help finance the defense program.

The risk in the whole movement is, of course, in overloading the country's economic structure. That is the tendency of all social security systems. They are lifted off a sound actuarial foundation and inflated to the point of collapse by politicians. The president's point that the plan will cushion the post-war economic shock has some merit, but the same purpose could be achieved by temporary instead of permanent legislation.

New York's Mayor LaGuardia, who predicted several months ago that the war would end in six months, now says it will end in thirteen months. Make up your mind, Fiorella.

The Duke of Windsor isn't as thoroughly Americanized as we thought. While in this country he didn't try to bum a couple of tickets to the world series.

The report that Argentina has refused a $110,000,000 loan from the United States should be rechecked. There must be some mistake.

The Battle Is Not Forever Lost

By MARSHALL MASLIN

"Not on the field of battle did we throw away our sword. But in the darkness, waiting by the waters of the ford."

You went forth to battle, brandishing your great sword.

It shown brightly in the morning sun, flashing grandly for all to see. . . . You were a great figure with the plume in your helmet and your broad shoulders arrogantly set toward the advancing foe. . . . Great things you were going to do, a great victory you would win. . . . You went forth a destined hero.

And then, what happened? . . . We saw you challenge. We saw you raise your famous sword. We heard the clash of blade on blade. We held our breath and pitied the stout lad who faced you and dared to dream of winning a fight with so stalwart a foe as you.

And then, O Shame! we saw you fling that proud blade to the earth and turn—and stumbling, faltering, gasping—run ignominiously toward our ranks—and your eyes were blazing and your jaw was set and on your face was ghastly terror—and you were a man none of us had ever seen before—the body of a giant ruled by the soul of a craven! . . . We could hardly believe that this stumbling fool was our bold, beloved friend and hero.

So now, my friend—now that it is all over, now that you have conquered your fear and returned to the field and slain your foe—tell me what happened on that astounding day.

You do not know? . . . Then let me tell you what you do not know. You lost that battle last night! As we lay by the ford and waited, not knowing when our enemy might come upon us, your fevered imagination spoke long and treacherously to you, conjuring defeat and shame before you until, unknowing, in the long night watches you lost your courage and in your soul threw that great sword away from you. You are one of those who picture evils before you encounter them and unman yourself with futile worry.

So today you marched unarmed upon the field of battle, having lost the conflict already in the loneliness of the night. . . . as does many another man who fears too much what has not yet happened and yields to fear before a blow has been struck.

Have I not spoken the truth to you, Stalwart Lad? . . . You nod your head in shame. Oh, not in shame, my friend! Seek out your lost sword and raise it in another cause!

People Indignant As New Tax Law Boosts Prices

By CHARLES P. STEWART
Central Press Columnist

Congress's governmental money-raising experts are beginning to get a powerful public reaction to the new tax law, effective since Oct. 1. It isn't a favorable one, either. Not that the levies provided for in the law itself are so much adverse as they are criticized. It is pretty generally recognized that Uncle Sam has to have the money.

The average consumer undoubtedly knew that he'd have to foot the bill for Uncle Sam's requirements, but he obviously resents having to pay a lot more, too.

It's like this:

Everybody Adds

Suppose the tax is so much per ton of something or per hogheadful, if it's a liquid. The government collects it on that basis. The producer pays exactly what's called for. Then he passes his stuff along to a wholesaler, tacking on the amount that he's paid, with perhaps a trifle added onto it. The wholesaler, in turn, transfers it to a retailer, also, most likely with a little additional rakeoff. The retailer sells it over his counter to the ultimate consumer.

But the retailer doesn't do his selling by the ton or the hogheadful. He does it by the ounce or halfpint or maybe just a glassful. These small measures' proportion of the tax probably isn't more than one, two, or three or possibly six or seven cents per ounce or swig each. Such midget transactions in mere coppers are inconvenient. So, instead of one, two, or three, or six or seven cents per cake, a nickel or a dime gets itself tacked on.

Percentage Shift

Well, just one nickel or one dime doesn't amount to much, as a lone sum of money, but it may represent a heck of a stiff percentage of increase.

For instance, hiking the price of a fifty-cent half pint of "licker" to sixty cents makes the stimulant cost twenty per cent more and a single slug of it, shot up from fifteen to twenty cents, is worse yet.

Such rates of increase, applied to a whole lot of items of merchandise, naturally sends the gross cost of living skyrocketing into the air.

Retailers are the boys I come principally into contact with, and the ones I know assure me that they're not the group who scoop in the nickels and dimes. Their story is that the extra-tax boosts are wished into prices higher up, by initial producers or wholesaling middlemen, they imply. As to that, I don't know, and doubtless it would take a congressional investigation, or some such thing, to find out.

Noticeable by All

The advance is noticeable to everyone, however.

It apparently took the public a few days to appreciate how generally it was due to be spread around, but it's manifest that it begins to appreciate it now, for every congressman's mail is crammed with letters from his home folk, squawking over the swollen size of their bills.

Some of the economic theorists contend that it's a good thing—that it'll force civilian buyers to cut down their purchases; that this will leave industry freer to produce defense and lease-lend supplies; that normal demand, dammed up for the present, will burst into a perfect post-emergency flood, thus preventing a business slump at that stage of the game.

Grim Outlook

Pessimists think not, however. Their notion is that today's taxation will have to be continued indefinitely; that post-emergency living costs will continue at top figures; that there'll be a slump because emergency production will be reduced to a minimum and that there won't be any of the anticipated epidemic of civilian buying to take up the slack.

In the meantime the retailing

NEW PREXY

Dr. Paul F. Douglass

Dr. Douglass, member of the Vermont legislature since 1937, clergyman, noted educator and writer, will be installed as president of the American University, Washington, D. C., tonight, at Memorial Continental hall. Paul V. McNutt, federal security administrator, will give the principal address.

WASHINGTON EXPERTS STILL UNABLE TO GET THIS ONE DOWN

No Gain Possible by Getting into War At Present, Gen. Hugh Johnson Says

By GEN. HUGH S. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9.—Whatever else may be said about it, there was some consistency in the neutrality legislation when our policy was to keep out of the war in Europe and, to that end, to forbade the risking of American lives, property and dollars in combat zones.

But when that policy was completely reversed in the Lease-Lend act and the president was authorized in his sole discretion to risk both American property and dollars in unprecedented amounts whenever and wherever on the broad service of the globe he decided, the neutrality acts became obsolete. They now only serve to create an added danger of risk to the sacrifice we are making.

Once the foundation in which they rested is pulled out from under them it is hard to see any difference between their outright repeal and some piecemeal monkey business this side of that.

Ship Arming Doubtful

Armed merchant ships is an expedient of very little value. It now takes too much technical equipment and crew to make it very effective against submarines and especially against combined submarine and aircraft attack. We haven't got either the equipment or the trained men to make more than a gesture at effective armament.

While the presence of a couple of cannon on board might make a submarine a little more wary, it would also make it much more apt to attack without any warning whatever.

Anyway, there is a good deal of hokum about getting congressional authority to arm merchant ships. It is pretty well understood in Washington that we have already armed several and that the most recently torpedoed merchantman was one of these.

Combat Zones Important

The first real question is whether American flag ships shall be permitted to sail into combat areas. That also has been done. The suggestion of Senator Pepper that we can get around the prohibitions by the Neutrality act on that by simply having the president un-proclaim his own proclaimed combat zones and say that what palpably is a combat zone is really not one is nothing short of immoral. If we are going to lift this ban, let's do it honestly—by repealing that provision of the Neutrality Act.

Then comes another question, far more vital. After we have lifted the ban and an American flag ship conveying contraband of war, is sunk while trying to crash an area under actual blockade, does that mean we are automatically at war?

Present Meaning Dubious

Technically it would not, under the old doctrine of international law. What it would mean today the lord only knows. It would depend a good deal on popular reaction and what the real foreign policy of this government is. If that policy is to get into the war now—or as soon as popular opinion is sufficiently hysterical, it would doubtless mean a war, traceable straight back to the repeal of the Neutrality act. But, that is really quibbling over a technicality. If this government wants to go to war now, it can find other means of drumming up the necessary emotions—repeal or no repeal.

It is hard to see what we have to gain by getting into the war now. We are not yet ready for it. More important still, it is hard to see what Britain has to gain by our getting into war now. That is more important, because we seem to do about what Britain wants. But, why should she want this now? We are sending her all the supplies we can deliver and have promised her far more—with the apparent consent of most of our people. But, if we get into this war ourselves our shipments abroad will be much more closely scanned and our people will demand a far greater share for our own defense and armament.

For Defense First

On these considerations, it seems that a filibuster against repeal of the Neutrality act would be very unpopular in this country. In the end it would do no good. In the meantime it could do much harm.

This column is not and never has been for unnecessary involvement in this war. It is for an impregnable American defense and superiority on all fronts—in the air, on sea and land, economically and on the home front—the preservation of civilian morale and of the business system.

It feels that we are weakening these defenses on several of these fronts. But, that is war, and when Congress makes such a decision as it did in the Lease-Lend act, it feels a duty to support that decision.

Blazonry

From the Cincinnati Times-Star

During the spring and summer months the prevailing hue of the earth is green. Fruit trees have a brief interval of delicate coloring in spring before they put forth the verdurous panoply of their leaves; in fields and gardens during the long summer the flowers are arrayed in more than the glory of Solomon, as Scripture hath it. Yet these are but moments, fugitive incidents, in the all-embracing greenness of the earth.

With October comes the Great Change. The world dons robes as if for a festival, whether a pageant of life or of death does not at once appear. Purple and gold and crimson, and every lovely shade in between, are its covering. The spectacle is drama beyond the reach of speech. We know what is to follow, but the first man could never have guessed it. He must have been happier that first autumnal time than any mortal has been since.

Morning Motto

There is an honor in business that is the fine gold of it; that reckons with every man justly; that loves light; that regards kindness and fairness more highly than goods or prices or profits. It becomes a man more than his furnishings or his house. It speaks for him in the heart of everyone. His friendship is serene and secure.

HENRY WADSWORTH LONGFELLOW.

Action by Unions Of Teamsters Is Seen as Piracy

From the Pittsburgh Press

A cash tribute of $3.52 is levied by the A. F. of L. Teamsters union on every truckload of food or other merchandise coming into Cleveland, and the safety director of that city has asked federal aid to abolish it.

This fee is often collected by violence or threats of violence. It is demanded for the "privilege" of unloading a truck or having it unloaded by a union member. It is supposed to represent payment for four hours of work but is required even if the job takes only a few minutes. A union official defends it as a fine imposed by Ohio teamsters on truck drivers who bring in produce grown by non-union agricultural workers in Michigan, Indiana and other states.

Paid by People

But of course the so-called fine is paid by the people of Cleveland. It is added to shipping costs and so to their cost of living. Since it is plainly a restraint on the free flow of interstate commerce, the Cleveland safety director asked the federal government to move against it under the anti-trust laws.

He finds, however, that the federal government is powerless to protect the people of Cleveland. The United States supreme court has held, in effect, that the anti-trust laws can't touch holdup men who prey on interstate trade under the cloak of unionism.

This Cleveland case is not unique. Pittsburgh Teamsters' local 249 levies a $3.10 "tax" on every incoming truck in the same fashion and under contract with the truck owners. New York drivers were convicted of racketeering for collecting $9.42, but the United States Circuit Court of Appeals exonerated them.

Labor restrictions on production and transportation—restrictions having nothing to do with wages or hours or working conditions—prevail in many cities. The Justice department's Anti-Trust division estimates that they cost American consumers over a billion dollars a year.

Bills Introduced

Three months ago bills designed to stop this robbery were introduced in Congress by Representative Monroney of Oklahoma, and Representative Walter of Pennsylvania. They differ in details, but either would subject unions to anti-trust prosecution for restraining trade to achieve purposes which obviously are not legitimate objectives of labor organization.

These bills, against the principle of which there can be no valid argument, were referred to the Judiciary committee of the House. The chairman of this committee is Representative Hutton Summers, of Texas. He and his committee can do a great service to the American people—and to the cause of honest labor—by holding prompt public hearings on these bills and reporting one of them out for action by Congress.

Nature Gives A Warning

From the Wheeling, W. Va., Intelligencer

Once again Nature is warning the American people against too great reliance in water as a primary source of electrical energy.

As a result of protracted drought, power shortages are developing in all hydro sections, and the rationing of consumers already is being contemplated. The TVA, which developed a serious power shortage during the spring dry spell, is in trouble again. The main stream dams, which were filled by July rains, are ready are requiring water from the storage reservoirs, which have been tapped to maintain the power supply.

T. V. A. officials agree that unless October is a wet month, rationing will have to be resorted to again.

In New England, the situation is understood to be even worse. There has been no adequate rain for a month, and steam stand-by plants are in full blast in the hydro region to keep the supply lines served.

In the face of this situation, which has developed twice now within a period of a few months, the federal government keeps pushing its water power program to the detriment of the general power industry. With an unlimited supply of coal available in the United States, with a private power industry capable of extending its facilities to any required degree, and with undisputed evidence on hand that electricity from coal burning plants is not only wholly dependable but cheaper than hydro, why does the administration cling to its costly water power hobby?

Factographs

It is a superstition of the sea that no ship should be given a name of exaggerated loftiness, like Titanic. Such ships are supposed to be ill-fated.

All true fishes are cold-blooded aquatic animals, breathe by means of gills, and swim with the aid of fins.

Seventy-five per cent of the population of the United States is said to live on surfaced highways.

The state of Texas alone produces twice as much petroleum as any foreign country.

The United States has more than 400,000 miles of railroad trackage.

A Ride in a Paper Boat

By MARIE BLIZARD

WRITTEN FOR AND RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

CHAPTER TWENTY-FIVE

SUE OPENED the door to the home-coming Adames and Fennells. She said, "Hello, Funny Faces! I got here too late to go to the station with Lou and Toby, but I don't have to leave until I've turned over the keys and a few suggestions. . . . I've got cocktails ready."

Hallie stood in the doorway, looking in, drinking it all in. Louise had put up new curtains. There was a slip-cover on the lounge. There were more pictures on the walls and two more rows of crowded bookshelves. But it was almost the same as that night when Eric said, "This is only the beginning. Next year we'll have a bigger place. And a bigger one the next year."

"We've so much to talk about," Louise said, coming in from the kitchenette with a platter of canapés.

"I'm anxious to talk about that job," Eric said.

"You're among friends, Adams. I can speak plainly."

"Why not?" he wanted to know.

"All I've got to offer you is a cakes-and-earfare job, old man, but things are pretty slow, with the summer coming along. We're putting more shows on in the fall, but you know we coast during the summer."

"Get to it, darling," Louise urged.

"Frankly, the best I can do for you is a bit on a morning program. I had to squeeze you in. The best I could get, with a 13-week guarantee, is $20 a week."

Hallie felt her rising hopes do a sharp side-slip. Twenty a week in New York!

Eric said gallantly, "That's swell, Toby. I'm not too proud to take it. Thanks very much."

Hallie thought, "He's sweet!"

"But two can't live on it," Louise spoke her thoughts out loud.

"This is where I come in," Sue put in. "Hallie, did Louise tell you I'm going to Europe with Aunt Augusta?"

Hallie and Eric nodded.

"I've sub-let my studio for the summer, so you'll have to clear out by the first of June; but we want someone to live at the place in the country, sort of keep an eye on it."

"Yes," Louise said brightly, "that's the second job."

"There's a catch in it," Sue told them. "Auntie won't part with any salary for a caretaker. What I thought was that you kids would have a nice, big, comfortable house to live in—indeinitely, because while I'm coming back in September, Auntie has decided to remain in the south of France."

Hallie's housekeeping brain was already at work on budgets: train-fare, gas, electricity, lunches for Eric, food for the two of them on $20 a week.

"It might be nice in the summer," Eric said dreamily. "Any swimming or tennis?"

Sue pulled at the lobe of her ear. "Yes and no," she answered. "If you had a car, any kind of a car, you could go to the lake. I don't know about tennis. Of course you might meet some people. . . ."

"I could go for a little country club life. Shall we take it, Hallie?"

Hallie let her breath out. "It's the answer to a prayer. When I go to Woburn, I can bring by old car back. Sue, you are an angel straight from the blue."

"Of course, it will just be for the summer," Eric said. "I'm going to see Meyerling at once, and the other producers."

"If you should happen to want to stay on"—Sue did not say "have to stay on"—there's plenty of wood and coal, and the vegetable garden yield is pretty good—if Hallie can keep up the garden."

"Oh, yes, yes I can," Hallie sang. It wasn't the cocktail that made her limbs sing; she was going to Woburn; her future was secured for a while. She wasn't in Hollywood. She'd never again have to walk down Sunset boulevard, never again have to stand at a tearoom door with a smile on her lips and a menu in her hand.

She wished that she could go to the big house just back of Greenwich that very night. Some fundamental thing in her made her long for the feel of a spade and rich earth beneath her fingers. She dreamed of the garden all that night. Under her magic touch the earth would yield wholesome things: tomatoes and corn and fat peas and good herbs. And flowers to remind her of the garden at home. She would tend the earth and it would give back its fruit to her. The years of worry and work had taken away something that was Hallie's girlhood; they were giving her something that was an age-old appreciation of roots and earthy things.

Sue and Augusta Amberson were not sailing for five weeks, but the weeks sped by. Hallie had three weeks in New York, and then she went to Woburn with Louise to spend a fortnight.

Dr. Singleton had rented his house. He was living "temporarily" with a crony, a retired physician, Dr. Goodenough, and so Hallie stayed those two weeks with Louise at her grandmother's home.

Her father showed the ravages of his years of worry and hard work and his recent illness. He "kept his finger" on special cases, but he had turned over most of his work to the younger Dr. Kelsey.

His income, Hallie soon realized, consisted largely of the proceeds from the rental of the house, after the high taxes and mortgage payments were deducted. But it was enough, so that he could have her old car put into good shape as a present.

After two weeks of bridge parties, luncheons and teas given for her, during which she talked brightly of the wonderful time she had had in Hollywood, Hallie was glad to leave with Louise and go back to her place as Eric's wife.

At last the day came when their trunk and small luggage was strapped to the car, the overflow to be carted in Sue's car, and the three of them started for the house that was to be their home for longer than they knew.

Augusta Amberson's house wasn't exactly a dream cottage, or was it the sort of country place copied by scenic designers. It was high and angular and painted a depressing greenish brown. Its rooms were many and small, and decorated and furnished with the heavy, dark wood of the Victorian period which had been the fashion when it was built.

But it was built sturdily on a hill and its many windows looked out upon rolling countryside and spreading lawns, on tall, cool-giving trees and, on that June day, there was a riot of color in the untended garden.

In the linen closets there were piles of lavender-scented sheets and fragrant blankets for the big four-posters in the bedrooms. And wood in the baskets by the wide hearths.

"It's pretty glum, but it's all yours," Sue said. "A man comes with butter and eggs and milk. It's sort of late to get started, but maybe you can get something out of the vegetable garden. . . . If you get a commutation ticket, the fare isn't high, and the station is only a 15-minute drive. I guess that's all."

Hallie said, "Is it all right to have company?"

"The sky's the limit," Sue said. "I want to invite Win here."

Hallie said that night, "It wasn't enough to just write and thank him for the check. I want to do it in person."

Eric was half asleep. "Win can stay where he is."

"But why, darling? Surely we can have him for a week-end."

"Asks too many questions. Might be embarrassing," Eric said sleepily.

"Questions? About what?"

Eric turned over and buried his head in the pillow. "About Sheila, if you must know. Now go to sleep and forget it."

Hallie didn't forget it. What questions could Win ask about Sheila?

OLTEN, Switzerland (AP) — The busy little industrial town of Olten is keenly interested in politics and elections always are hotly contested.

Four political parties, fearing independent campaigning would weaken their chances, clubbed together in submitting a list of candidates for juries to the district court.

Where He Came In

PUEBLO, Colo. (AP)—The last chore that Al Peavy performed as a shipping clerk in a steel mill, before leaving to join the army, was the crating of some outgoing bales of wire. The first chore that Private Peavy performed for the army in a Texas camp was the unloading of those same bales of wire.

Forecasts are issued by the Weather bureau, department of Commerce two to four times daily.

Shadow and Substance

COLUMBIA, S. C. (AP)—Former Senator James H. Hammond was awakened in the wee small hours by the efforts of his son to kill a snake on the floor of their rural cabin. But, he adds, the "snake" turned out to be only a shadow of a four-foot reptile on the window screen in the bright moonlight.

"Elmer," a little gold bear, with a watch for his face, appears at least once in every picture Connie Russell makes.

Draft Slackers
By Marriage Not
Good Material

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX, Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage — Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Many letters have come to this column from young men who, in absolutely cold-blooded fashion, are marrying in the hope of escaping the draft.

Perhaps they are invoking a fool's Paradise; that, only time can tell. France died because of her belief in the Maginot Line. Norway was the victim of her own high ideals; nations run by madmen were beyond her ken. Some of our young men are putting their faith in a wedding ring. The golden circle may not be more effective than those crumbling defenses which did not defend Europe. Marrying to avoid the draft doesn't appeal to me.

Such sentiments crop up in letters, backed with arguments such as this: "If we are attacked on our own shores, well and good, but to go overseas and fight for the British empire is an unpalatable dose for me."

Another letter, from the Middle West, reads: "Why should we fight for a country which has never paid the interest on its war debts? They've always high-batted us be-

A truly marvelous change can be brought about by overcoming miserable digestive complaints, underweight, sluggishness and loss of appetite—all by two important steps—

Restore vital digestive juices in the stomach... energize your body with rich, red blood. Here's how!

If you are one of those unfortunate who have been ill, or have suffered with colds, the flu, worked under a strain, failed to eat the proper foods, or have been vexed by overtaxing worries... yet have no organic trouble or focal infection... and your red-blood-cells have become reduced in vitality and number... if your stomach digestion refuses to work properly, then here is good news for you! S.S.S. Tonic is especially designed to build back deficient blood strength... to revive and stimulate those stomach juices which digest the food so your body can make proper use of it in rebuilding worn-out tissue. These two important results enable you to enjoy the food you do eat... to make use of it as Nature intended. Thus you may get new vitality... pep... become animated... more attractive!

Feel and look like yourself again. Yes, when you tone up the stomach and get its digestive juices flowing freely, you should enjoy again that old-time zest for food... stomach digestive miseries should vanish. S.S.S. cause they've lacked the price of coming over here and becoming acquainted with a democracy at first hand.

Won't Save Britain

"The blitzkrieg is loose in my family," says another letter, "because, at 20, I intend to marry a cute little number of whom they disapprove. I am not what you'd call head-over-heels in love, but I don't want to risk my skin saving the British empire. My great and ever so many great-grand-fathers fought in the Revolutionary War. Why should I run my chances of being shell-shocked, blind, limping through life on one leg to save British institutions?"

"I've no more use for Hitler than for any other mad-dog but let them fight it out in their own backyard without my help. So I have become engaged to the aforementioned cutie, who may help me to evade the draft."

"My family did without a good deal to give me two-years at a good university. They feel, and perhaps not without reason, that as long as they scrimped to help educate me, I should now get a job and help to repay them or at least accept gladly what they are pleased to call 'honorable service in the U. S. Army.'"

"I quit college and have a measly job, and I expect to marry the cutie who is pretty and amiable and isn't even a good housekeeper, she having had a job as file clerk ever since she quit high school. She probably doesn't know dust when she sees it or a frying pan from a broiler."

Impressed by Victims

"Doubtless, like my mother and the rest of the family, you'll think me a slacker, but I've seen those fragments of men in a hospital not far from Philadelphia, left over from the last war—shell-shocked, blind, legless. Why should I incur similar disabilities to defeat Germany's latest paranoias? If they come through this war, they'll find another one. As a nation, they're never happy unless they're helling, goose-stepping or being kicked in the pants and told what to do. I've said my say, and I'll sign myself."

No matter what the basic merits of the conflicting arguments, it seems to me that men who marry to evade the draft seem pretty poor material, either as husbands or soldiers. I hate to think of our splendid country in the grip of young men who marry to avoid responsibility. What do you readers of this column think of the reactions of such young men?

Mother Disapproves

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have three boy friends who have taken me out for the past two years. Each one of them gave me a gift last Christmas, and I felt rather peculiar at not returning the compliment. My mother thinks it's all right to accept gifts from boys, but that it isn't the correct thing to give, unless there's an engagement in sight.

My girl friends give their boy friends presents, and it seems the natural thing to do on a holiday. Of course, I don't think it need be anything expensive, but just a thought to show appreciation.

SISTER

Don't you think it would be better to suggest, as delicately as possible, to some close friend of your sisters that a shower would be acceptable? These gift-bearing parties are never given by the immediate family for the obvious reason that it looks like a bid for presents.

And a shower for a second baby is unusual. You might get around this vexed question by giving your sister a little party, with simple refreshments such as fruit punch.

Will you tell me whether I should figure on giving my friends gifts this Christmas?

F. K.

It is always permissible to give perishable gifts to a boy, such as a box of candy of your own making or a cake. And indeed there is no objection to a girl giving a more substantial present to her boy friends if it's inexpensive.

The absence of gifts on your part doesn't seem to have lessened your popularity, as they have continued to take you out for the past two years. So it probably will be best to restrict your giving to Christmas cards, if your mother still objects to anything more substantial.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By SHEPARD BARCLAY
"The Authority on Authorities"

DON'T BE TOO WOODEN

AFTER YOUR partner has opened the bidding, and you know he can lay down a dummy containing his share of high cards, your own hand becomes more potent. Even if you have no high cards, worth speaking of, you may still bid soundly if you have any appreciable suit length. Let those who rave at you for responding "without a trick and a half" have their fun. But if you can count a probability of about four "playing tricks" of any kind—even if only a seven-card suit in an honorless hand, or a six-card suit with about a couple of queens or so in the hand—bidding your length is sounder bridge than passing.

That is definitely not the bidding which was done on this deal in a game of rubber bridge among rather literally-minded players who had given a careless reading to a few good books. They had learned that, to keep the bidding open with a response of any kind to a one-bid, you should have about a trick and a half in honors, or about a trick if you have a good suit.

Here they could not count East as having anything better than "a half a trick plus." They counted the spade Q-J as only a bare plus value because it did not have a small card with it to make it a half trick. So the entire four players at the table agreed that East was right in passing. Consequently, the deal was passed out at 1-Heart, and the chance for a game went glimmering.

Later, when their error was explained, they all saw it. East could count three "length tricks" in his six-card club suit, plus a chance for a trick at the top. In addition to which his spade honors were potentially valuable. As it turned out, if East had bid 2-Clubs West would have snapped into 3-No Trumps. Even against a spade lead game would have been easy.

Stronger Democracy, Hemispheric Defense Aims of Mexico, President Camacho Tells American Girl Writer

By MALVINA STEPHENSON
Central Press Writer

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 9.—In this grave world crisis, America is fortunate in having a Mexican president with the outlook and temperament of Manuel Avila Camacho.

His policy of moderation, aimed at internal stability and hemispheric unity, clearly harmonizes with democratic interests. A settlement of Mexico's long-standing differences with the United States can be expected from such an administration.

"The United States will never have any trouble from this side of the border," assured the new chief executive, whose conservation and conciliation stand out against the leftist background of his predecessor, Lazaro Cardenas.

In the course of the conversation, President Camacho briefly highlighted his current program. It calls for strengthening Mexican democracy, forging a strong link in the chain of hemispheric defense and consolidating the recent gains of the revolution.

In Palacio Nacional
For the informal interview, I was received at the historic Palacio Nacional. Sentries, according to the old Spanish custom, were on guard at the palace gates. They admitted me into the courtyard, but it took the services of an interpreter to work through the series of executive ante-rooms.

However, once my identity became established and my mission understood, I was graciously received by the office staff. From the ornate cabinet hall, a good-looking young military aide escorted me into the inner private office.

If there were any doubts as to just how I should approach Mexico's highest official, I was immediately put at ease. The president arose, approaching a few steps and extending his hand in a democratic fashion. After a brief greeting, he motioned me to sit on a quaint little antique sofa.

When the executive was settled, the young lieutenant took his position nearby. The huge quarters almost seemed to swallow our trio.

President and Mrs. Camacho

An ornate ceiling spread high above our heads, and the fine parquet floor was unusually intricate for its size. These surroundings harked back to early colonial grandeur, but the man with whom I talked was definitely a citizen of the modern world. Looking thoroughly American, he might even have been taken for a successful business or political figure in one of our own metropolises.

Well Dressed
He was well dressed, and groomed to the point of being immaculate. His tailored suit was fashioned of navy pin-striped wool, the blue tones repeated in a silk print tie. Black leather sport oxfords added a "country club" accent to this attire. The president himself appears as I had expected from his pictures. He is of medium height, broad-shouldered and well built. His shock of dark hair is combed neatly in place, and his skin is bronzed to complete the brunette label. Although the president used an interpreter for the interview, his friendly smile and manner readily bespoke his feelings. Closely following the translation, he folded his hands quietly and focused his dark close-set eyes.

And he was always ready with an answer, speaking rapidly but with a dignified reserve. Occasional gestures emphasized his points. For concentration, sometimes he stroked his fatty jaw.

The president, however, rarely employs showmanship, and there is little of the dramatic in his nature. But a calm assurance and a capable approach inspire confidence in those who get to know this man.

His "middle-of-the-road" program is a balancing conflicting interests both in and out of Mexico. He is first and last a democrat who prefers harmony and conciliation. He moves slowly, in that he avoids extremes and is willing to wait for compromise. Both his own political philosophy and his past performance point to friendship with the United States and the democracies.

Oil Question
Looking toward a comprehensive new agreement with the United States, President Camacho predicts a speedy settlement of the all-important oil question. The representatives of expropriated companies are in daily conference with government officials.

As an evidence of his "good faith" to meet the financial obligations, the president is concentrating on the improvement of the administration of the oil industry. Despite the threat of labor trouble, he is determined to put operations on a profitable basis.

Of Course Mexico's whole economy has suffered considerably since the war cut off European markets. The threat of economic disaster as well as political and military conquest has brought Mexico even closer to the United States in a program of hemisphere unity.

Although the Mexican president remains silent on definite facts and figures, there persists the report that a huge loan will be made available through the United States. Mexico is in need of capital, particularly for the mechanization of its army and its agricultural industry.

Despite the expropriation of United States, British and Dutch oil companies in 1938, President Camacho has opened the door to new foreign capital. He says the opportunities are most extensive, but, above all, in the fields of electrification, communications, mining, fishing and irrigation.

"One of the greatest desires of my administration is to educate the farmer and improve his technique of production," the president asserted.

"The accent will be on mechanization. If we are unable to produce sufficient implements here, then they will be imported from the United States."

Co-operation with U. S.

In view of the present world situation and the scarcity of foreign markets, the president recognizes the necessity of gearing the whole economy with that of the United States. He mentioned the mid-summer agreement under which the United States absorbs Mexican surplus products for the next 18 months.

At the termination of the present war (and he predicts a victory for the democracies in 1943) President Camacho believes that both Mexico and the United States can find in the markets of Europe an outlet for their respective surpluses.

In dedicating his energies to the multiple current problems, the Mexican president faces a very heavy schedule. Even after the office door is closed, he keeps books and memos at his side, often reading in bed.

The president's home life has been very pleasant, and with his wife he often enjoys horses and various sports. He still adores the "little woman" who joined him at the altar in 1928. She is the former Dona Soledad Orozco of Guadalajara.

"My wedding day has been the happiest of my life," he often tells close friends. The president's wife, however, has not shared his political spotlight, and her role in official life is the very antithesis of Eleanor Roosevelt's. She adheres to the strict old Spanish code that puts woman's place in the home.

In fact, I encountered no feminine secretaries or assistants, much less Mexican girl reporters, in my tour of palace offices. But, aside from feeling like an object of curiosity, my only serious embarrassment developed when a flustered operator motioned me out of a crowded elevator marked (in Spanish) "For Army Officers Only."

Of the more than 5,000,000 farms in the United States, the Census bureau found over eighty-four percent had flocks of chickens in 1940.

THE DAILY STORY

FORGIVE ME

It Was All His Fault from Start to Finish, but Who's Stanley To Contradict a Conscientious Wife?

BY JOSEPH BARTON

"Stanley, darling, aren't you the careless one!" Edith laughed, half-embarrassed, on their wedding day. Like the traditional groom, Stanley had absolutely forgotten to give the ring to the best man, or make sure that he had it himself. The cleric smiled quietly.

"It's all right. The best man has a signet ring we can use for now and nobody will be the wiser," he said in a low tone. "It happens often."

But Stanley frowned, not because of the ring, or the embarrassment Edith might have. Carelessness was as much a part of him as his big, muscled frame. He'd have to watch his step from now on.

He was earnest and smart and industrious. Only he sometimes got to thinking about other things and perhaps forgot to bring home something from downtown that Edith had asked him to shop for, or let the coal ordering go too long and then half-froze the family until they could get an emergency order. It burned Edith up, and she made no bones about saying so.

"Hello, honey! I brought Benny Gordon home for dinner!" he called brightly when he came into the house that afternoon of his first promotion, when little Frankie was two.

And then he stopped, his big face working oddly. He remembered then—they had had a dinner engagement with one of the firm's most influential customers and his wife! Edith had even stewed around for a week, making herself a new formal so that she would look like a successful salesman's wife.

"Listen, Stanley, is anything wrong?" Benny asked worriedly.

seeing the stricken expression on his friend's face. The big man set his jaw in self-distaste.

"I've been... careless again, that's all. We had a dinner date with James Graffington tonight. And say, I don't think Edith is home!" He started through the trim bungalow.

"Maybe she went on ahead and made some kind of excuse for you, Stanley. Would she leave a note?" Benny helped.

"Yeah, I'll look," Stanley said, but with a growing conviction that everything was not right. Of course, he had been promoted—and the boys had thrown a little party after work for him. That had taken two little hours, carelessly.

"Maybe I should have telephoned Edith. I kind of forgot, what with all the excitement and the boys being so nice and all. It isn't like Edith to just go out without leaving a note!"

"They looked through the house from stem to stern. The junior bed where little Frankie should be, with some young girl from the neighborhood to watch him, was empty. Edith had made good her vow to leave him because of his carelessness!"

"It looks as though she went somewhere besides a dinner party, Stanley," Benny pointed out soberly. "Look, that baby wardrobe of Frankie's is stripped just about bare!"

Stanley sat down on the edge of their bed and held his head in his hands. Three years of perfect marriage, with little Frankie and a good wife and a good job—and he had broken it all up with one stroke of carelessness, like the straw that broke the camel's back!

"Somebody ought to shoot me and put me out of my misery, Benny!" he moaned. "You'd think that a man who had all that I had would at least appreciate it. But do I? Right here!"

I hang around the grill with the office lads when I should have been home telling Edie about the good news. I deserve it. She's gone for good, Benny!"

"Sure looks like it, Stanley," Benny admitted with a sudden awareness of the deadly stillness of the empty place. It had the chill feeling of a house where the vital person who runs it has vanished.

"It can't be true!" Stanley said, almost to himself. He got up and roamed the house like a caged, frustrated animal.

"I guess that she took most of her clothes, too!" Benny reported dolefully after a second inspection of the house. "I guess that, like you said, she just couldn't take any more of your carelessness, Stanley. Women are like that—they take it until they're fed up right to the top, then they explode!"

Stanley's glance flitted hopelessly over the desk top as he turned on the light. No note was in sight. He'd reform if it killed him, he vowed! Maybe he could eventually win back his wife and his family and his happiness.

He banged the desk in a miserable gesture. The little china dog parried off and broke in a dozen places. Stanley stooped mechanically to pick them up—and saw the note where it had fallen under the desk!

Edith's mother was sick, the note said, and besides, the Graffingtons had postponed the dinner. She had tried to call him at the office, but too late. She had been careless, but would he forgive her. She and Frankie would be gone for at least a week, she guessed. Love and kisses.

Then Stanley saw why the note had fallen off the desk. He had been careless again that morning—and let the blower on the air conditioner on full force. The draft from the register next to the desk had nearly caused the note to be hidden when it blew off the desk!

"Excuse me, Benny," he said determinedly. Everything's all right. I'm going down cellar and fix something!" — (Distributed by United Feature Syndicate.)

Writer Dates Up Ruby Keeler —And Gets a Free Lesson in Golf

By VERN HAUGLAND
AP Feature Service
HOLLYWOOD — Tap-dancing Ruby Keeler is one of Hollywood's best golfers. She had a date the other day with a rank amateur. During this little match, I discovered that a date with Ruby is a date with a driver, a midiron and a little white ball—and an opportunity now and then to wave back to Ruby, off in the distance. Miss Keeler has a way of driving 250 yards straight down the fairway, of power-housing her iron shots, and of placing her approach shots accurately on the green. She's a two-putter, too. But she puts funny.

"I have an unusual stance," she said, crooking one knee, stiffening the other and leaning back as though about to seat herself on a hip-high stump.

Then she sank a 20-foot putt. Her caddy shouldered a stout bag containing 14 clubs. "Never can tell when I might need any one of 'em," she declared, although in our twosome she never came near a sandtrap or the rough.

19th Hole Is Early
"We didn't play a full round, however. After a few holes I conceded defeat and we repaired by mutual agreement to the clubhouse. It was a hot afternoon, anyhow.

Ruby, along with many other film celebrities, belongs to the Lakeside Country Club. She lives with her mother and two of her three sisters a few blocks away. When she's not busy in a picture—she hasn't been very busy that way these last few years—she gets in 18 or 36 holes three or four times a week.

For our 2 o'clock date, Ruby arrived 5 minutes late, wearing a gray skirt and white blouse. Of medium height, she is slender, has dark brown hair and looks much younger than thirty-one.

"I have an unusual stance," says Ruby dropping a putt.

She changed from street shoes into brown-and-white golf brogans.

"Aren't they disreputable looking?" she laughed. "But they're very comfortable."

She signed our names on the guest register, borrowed a set of clubs for me, and we started. At the first green we discovered I had no putter, so we alternated in using hers.

While we were waiting for a slow foursome ahead of us, Ruby told me she started golfing in earnest three years ago "because I didn't have anything else to do."

How to Avoid Worry
Her best score at Lakeside, where women's par is 77, was an 80. On an earlier course at Catalina she once made 77. She also has shot a two on a par-4 hole.

"I made it off a wood shot, so it was practically a hole-in-one," she pointed out.

Ruby's biggest golf thrill was in

Over coffee and cigarettes on the clubhouse veranda, later, we talked quite a while and then Ruby departed to tap in the

A Lesson from the Chinese

The story is told that the Chinese pay the doctor to keep them well, and if they contract illness, the doctor pays them instead. Whether or not this story is true, the general idea is sound. Serious illness often can be prevented by regular health examinations. Form a habit of visiting your doctor often—at least twice a year. If you do not have a family physician, we will be glad to recommend several from whom you can make your selection.

keep in practice with her dancing between pictures — "unless golf can be called a form of dancing." Ruby had just talked by telephone with her adopted son, Al Joelson, Jr., 6, who was vacationing with Joelson in Miami. "He said, 'Mommy, I'm having lots of fun on the beach, but I'm coming home in a week,'" she smiled. "I have a new snapshot of him and he's getting so tanned."

Maryland Observation Reports Are Poor

BAITIMORE, Oct. 9 (AP) — Maj. Gordon Saville, executive officer of the First Interceptor Command at Mitchell Field, N. Y., advised the Baltimore Sun tonight that Maryland was the only state on the Eastern seaboard taking part in the air raid tests to provide poor observer reports.

Saville said he did not intend to be critical, in that Maryland observers probably were misinformed about hours of duty and other work, but added:

"At any rate, reports were so widely scattered from the posts that they did not provide a complete enough picture for interceptor (plane) operations."

The officer said that of all the flights sent out from Mitchell Field and directed over Maryland, "our charts show that the Maryland area failed to observe or report a substantial number."

"The air defense is a vital part of the physical defense of the country and is as permanent and perhaps as important a factor as the police, fire and coast guard services."

He said shifts of observers should run from 6 a. m. to 6 p. m. every day with exception of Sunday through next Thursday.

Parents Should Help Children To Like Teachers

Mothers and Fathers Often Criticize Instead of Praise

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph. D.

A teacher of music in a certain college of education told me of a boy who in the public school had refused to try to sing until he reached the high school. There a girl classmate, whom he greatly admired, persuaded him to try and he won a prize as a baritone singer in his school. About the time he entered school his mother, it was found, had laughed at him when he tried to sing. He never had tried again until in adolescence a sweet girl persuaded him to try.

When I was a lad about thirteen I had a teacher in the country school to whom I took a strong personal dislike. I thought he wasn't fair. He would have our school sing often. To "spite" him, I would keep silent. My dislike for him who sang well and who wanted us to sing kept me from trying to learn music although my sister and older brother used to beg me to sing with them.

Use Understanding
Such a small thing had large hazards for my future. How I regret today that I was so stubborn then as not to take advantage of my opportunities. I have a notion that the teacher should have been a little more skilful. Of course, he was a conscientious fellow, attempting to do what he thought was best, just as many of us conscientious parents, even when we try the hardest, sometimes make the gravest failures. Mere conscientiousness is not enough. We need to get more wisdom and, with wisdom, greater understanding of how the child feels and how to curb his feelings to cooperation.

Earlier I had another teacher whom I admired exceedingly. He made me like arithmetic and succeeded in learning it. I like it to this day. That teacher doubtless was responsible for the hours and hours of drudgery I have been willing to go through in researches in the learning and teaching of this subject, on which I have published a number of articles in scientific journals. With the help of Mrs. Meyers I have even written a series of text-books on arithmetic. They may be good, but by point is that the influence of one teacher upon me seems to have been very powerful. No doubt you could testify to similar experiences.

Parents Can Help
We parents can do a great deal to make our children like their teachers. They often will recite at home things they dislike at school and sometimes will complain about the teacher. At such times, where we are not wise, we may add a word of criticism about that teacher, causing them to exaggerate her seeming faults and to acquire the habit of complaining. Before we know it our children will despise teacher, and even the subjects she teaches. If we were to be more sensible, were to keep quiet, or even drop a worthy word of praise for her we might do a world of good for our children and their success at school.

Solving Parent Problems
Q. Should a parent apologize to the child on discovering he had erred in rebuking or punishing this child?

A. Most certainly. Since practically every parent will make some such mistakes, and should apologize if he has a conscience, sense of justice, and respect for the sacredness of another's personality.

Housewives Form Organization To Fight Milk Price

Syracuse Women Fear
Children Will Be Deprived of Product

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Oct. 9 (AP)—A group of housewives, proclaiming "this is milk, not fur coats," has organized here to halt an impending milk price rise they feared would deprive their children of the product.

The movement was touched off by a mother of four children, attractive 33-year-old Mrs. Carl Nye. She became aroused at a three-day old AFL drivers and dairy plant workers' strike for higher wages which, if successful, the city's largest dairy said, would force higher prices.

Describing herself as "just an ordinary housewife," Mrs. Nye took over as temporary chairman of "Organized Housewives," dispatched volunteer workers in a block-by-block enrollment campaign, and at the end of the first day's kitchen canvass reported results "very encouraging."

"Our husbands tell us we can't do this and we can't do that," asserted Mrs. Nye. "We can. There is no more powerful group than the housewives if they act together."

"We are not concerned with problems of the drivers, farmers or producers," observed Mrs. Nye. "We are only concerned with the welfare of the community. If the price of milk goes up we are forced to use less of it and the health of the community is undermined."

"This is milk, not fur coats," Denied home deliveries since Monday because of the truck drivers' strike, the housewives have been saving four cents a quart by making purchases at dairy plants for ten and eleven cents.

Likes Her Job

PORT RILEY, Kans. (AP)—Miss Corinne Aicher, hostess at the cavalry replacement training center, reports that she likes her job—and so, very probably, would approximately 1,000,000 other girls. "I receive about five or six proposals a week," she says with a pretty smile.

Forty-Year-Old Dream Now True As Chicago Becomes Fourth City With Subways, Scheduled for 1942

By Central Press
CHICAGO, Oct. 9.—Chicago today is the fourth American metropolis and the world's 16th city to provide a subway system for local rapid transit.

The city's first subway, however, is only part of an extensive, long-range local transportation and super-highway program prepared by city engineers at the request of Mayor Edward J. Kelly. Contemplating the ultimate expenditure of an estimated $572,000,000, the city program is designed to provide 55 miles of subways, to modernize, unify and extend existing local mass transportation facilities, and to create a city-wide, 82-mile network of super-highways.

The initial subways, eight and three-quarter miles of double tube, one track to a tube, are now in the final stages of construction. These subways, extending north and south in State and Dearborn streets, through and beyond Chicago's famous loop, constitute the terminal facilities for the proposed city-wide system. Future subways are to be built in three construction stages as financing is available.

After Forty Years
For forty years Chicago had discussed and planned subways. Almost overnight this long period of inaction was translated into action when construction was started on Dec. 17, 1938. Of the $37,400,000 estimated cost of the initial subways, exclusive of rolling stock and operating equipment, the Federal Works Agency is to contribute $23,130,000, and the city $14,270,000. The city's share is being financed from the traction fund without dipping into any local tax funds.

Rapid transit trains are scheduled to start operating through the subways in 1942. Connections are to be made with the elevated system at three points where the elevated trains will enter and leave the subways.

There are to be 29 mezzanine stations on these two routes. In the downtown area, the mezzanines are to be near each of the four corners of each intersecting street. Reversible escalators and stairs are to connect the mezzanines with the center loading platforms, which in the downtown area, are to be continuous through the loop. Four passageways, two for transfer passengers, are to connect the two routes. Architectural finish, station control and ventilating equipment are to be of modern design. Fluorescent lighting will be used throughout the system, and train operation will be safeguarded by automatic block signal and train control systems.

To Save Time
Nearly 100,000,000 riders annually are expected to use the initial system. Time savings will be substantial. Northwest, north and southside patrons will save 12½, 8 and 3½ minutes each per trip. With part of the elevated trains operating through the subways, movement of the trains remaining on the elevated loop will be materially speeded up, cutting about seven minutes from the running time around the loop, during rush hour periods.

The initial subways will also be a major step in the long contemplated removal of the elevated loop structure. Short extensions of the two routes, planned for the second stage of construction, will permit removal of the east (Wabash avenue) and north (Lake street) sides of the loop. The other two sides can be torn down when a subway in Wells street on the west side of the downtown district is constructed.

An ordinance providing for unification of the Chicago surface lines and the elevated lines was passed by the city council June 19, 1941.

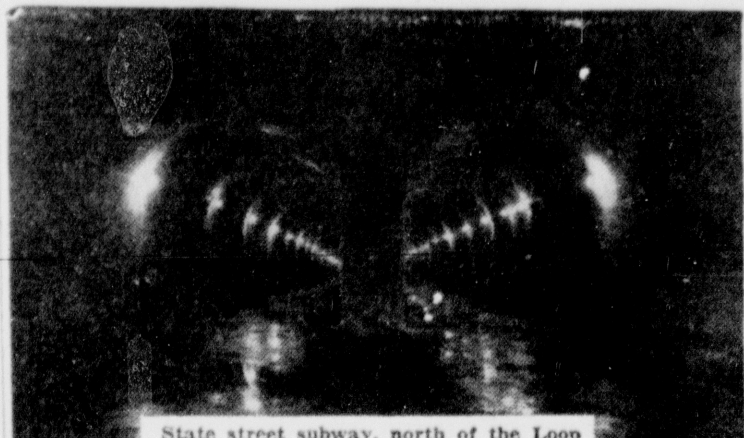

Equipment Program
Only a few more important steps must be taken to make the ordinance effective. Its principal provisions call for expenditure of $102,000,000 for new equipment, including streamlined subway-elevated cars, buses and street cars; 227 miles of extensions of local transit facilities; 301 miles of bus substitutions; for present street car operations, and 157 miles of new express bus routes. Co-ordination of suburban services with local transportation facilities through transfer exchanges is also contemplated.

The extensive super-highway program embraces seven routes serving all sections of the city, and completely segregating through traffic from local traffic. Start of construction with the west route along the Congress street east-west axis of the city, now awaits only approval of the project. This eight-lane highway is to be below grade for most of its length. Cross traffic is to be over viaducts. Pedestrians are to be barred from the highway. Parking is to be prohibited.

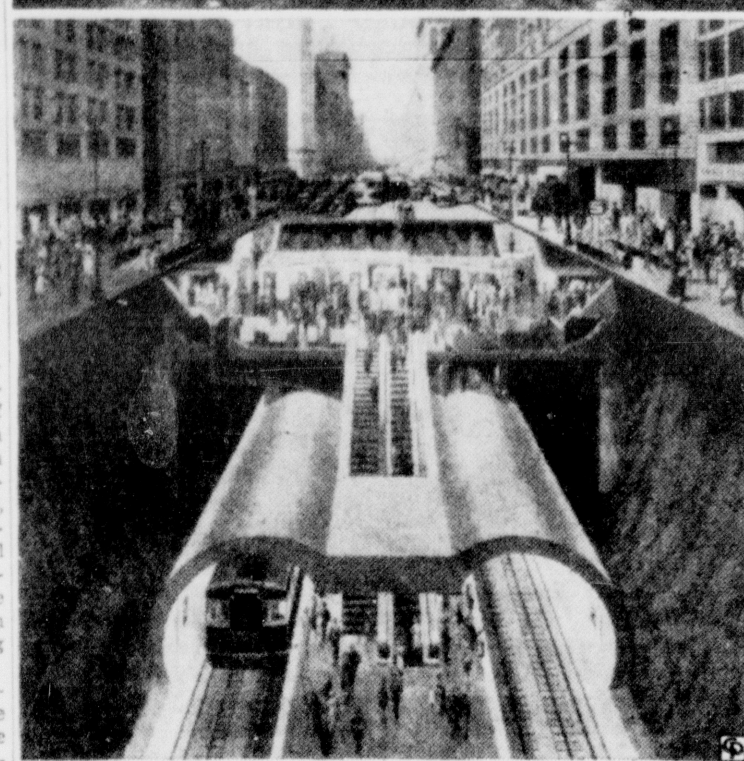

Design and construction of the initial subways, and planning of the subway extensions and the comprehensive super-highway system have been directed by Philip Harrington, commissioner of the department of subways and super-highways, who has also been one of the important figures in the negotiations for traction unification.

Firemen Put Out Another Grass Fire

A grass fire on the Western Maryland Railway tracks was put out in twenty-five minutes by West Side Fire Company which was called at 9:35 o'clock last evening. Firemen said the blaze, which spread between the Baltimore street bridge and the Queen City Brewing Company plant, was probably caused by a small camp fire started by tramps.

men in each of the several departments shall, through their respective representatives and committees, be invited to appear before the mayor and city council at suitable times and convenient hours for the purpose of discussing any problems with relation to working conditions as the same may arise.

In conclusion Commissioner Edwards and Reynolds stated that they sincerely hope that if these recommendations are adopted, that a high degree of efficiency will be obtained among the men, and that a cordial and harmonious relationship will be promoted to the end, that the public will receive the very highest grade of public service.

WTBO will direct the presentation of short features concerning the Red Cross over the local radio.

C. V. Burns, of the News staff, J. William Hunt, of the Times; M. F. Prendergast, of the Guide; and Mel Fliske, of the Voice of Labor, will head the newspaper publicity campaign.

Thomas G. Davis will head the publicity drive in Frostburg; J. Milton Dick in Lonaconing and W. Earle Coby and James Alfred Avirett will be co-chairmen of the speaker's bureau during the campaign. A new feature of this year's campaign will be press conferences to be held each Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock at Red Cross headquarters.

Progress in

the 1890's great changes have taken place, better buildings, playgrounds, libraries, equipment, shops, laboratories, administrative organization and a lengthened school year are obvious evidences of progress, the speaker declared.

The high school enrollment has increased from 200,000 to over 7,000,000. In our own county it has grown from 125 to over 5,000. These objective changes are easily seen by all, but the changes which have taken place within the schools themselves are not so obvious to the laymen, Kopp said.

Text Books Are Better

At this point Prof. Kopp contrasted a third grade reader in use in 1868 in Maryland and the present book by saying it was likely not many third grade pupils could understand the oldtime reader with its stories pointing morals which only students of sixteen or eighteen years of age could grasp.

Kopp also gave several other examples of how present day text books and readers are a great improvement over their predecessors. The development in education was accelerated by scientific experimentation in many school subjects, he added.

These studies led to fundamental changes in the content of the curriculum, its organization and methods of teaching, Kopp declared. We have advanced from the days when it was expected of third grade children to spell and understand such words as—expectant, forlorn, adduced, prodigiously, formidable, tractable, tremulous, convulsed, and oblivion, Kopp pointed out.

Advancement Pointed Out

Mention of elementary school reading does not mean the same advancement has not been made in arithmetic, history, geography and English, Kopp said. The old history, for instance, Kopp continued, with its long lists of dates and isolated, unrelated facts which were meaningless and uninteresting, is to be contrasted with the present day course of study.

Now the emphasis is placed on social inter-relationships, the dependence of all of us on others, the significance of historical events of the past in interpreting the present.

The schools have also been accused of having too many frills. These terms are applied rather generally to a school program by the critics but when pressed to be specific the insinuation is likely to be confined to music, arts, home making courses, industrial arts, dramatics, physical education, games, school newspapers and such like, Kopp explained.

If we do not permit blind and stupid leadership to curtail or interfere with the work of the schools, Kopp declared, then the present school children and their children will continue to sing with enthusiasm, "God Bless America, Land of the Free."

Mental Defense Is Necessary, DAR Is Told at Meet

Ignorance and Indifference Are Enemies of Men, Major Says

Mrs. R. Finley Thompson, state registrar, reported on the state membership for the summer at the meeting of the state chairmen of the Daughters of the American Revolution Wednesday morning in the Hotel Alexander, Hagerstown. Miss Pearl Eader, regent of the Creps Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution spoke informally at the meeting of the State Chairmen of the Committee of National Defense Through Patriotic Education.

Must Prepare Adequately

Declaring that "we must prepare adequately until we have mental as well as military defense," Harold D. Major, of the United States Chamber of Commerce, addressed the audience at the defense meeting. Dr. Major said he regarded the lack of understanding of the issues today as a grave danger to national defense. Ignorance, indifference and insolence, he pointed out, have always been the arch enemies of free men.

The dictators of today are counterparts of the dictators of history who have always sought to enslave their fellowmen, and the only language the dictator knows, the speaker declared, is military might. Americans are called upon, he said, to translate their love for freedom into production of armaments and prove to the dictators that guns speak more expressively and effectively in the cause of freedom than in serving the ends of hate and greed.

John S. White, majority floor leader of the Maryland House of Delegates, in his plea for all-out defense efforts, urged all to stand by the president in his foreign policies, declaring Americans must be united in the perils of facing them.

Use Established Organizations

Mrs. Irvine L. Miller, state chairman of National Defense Through Patriotic Education, warned all women to steer clear of the many new organizations and to devote their time to Americanisms. She favored the idea of continuing work with old established organizations such as the Red Cross and the Daughters of the American Revolution.

The social activities for the two-day conference included a breakfast given by Mrs. Loyal Alden, Baltimore, state chairman of Red Cross for the Daughters of the American Revolution and her staff; a tea by Mrs. Leo H. Miller, regent of the Conococheague Chapter; a dinner by Conococheague Chapter and a sight-seeing trip to Antietam battlefield and other points of historical interest.

Library Has

volume is written as a text but should be valuable to any young person about to begin a newspaper career.

A thoroughly entertaining book is T. Wood Clarke's "Emigres in the Wilderness," the romantic and little known stories of the French families who fled to this country when their lives were threatened by the revolution and Napoleon. The book ends with the remarkable story of Eleazar Williams, the supposed Dauphin, whose curious history has never before been fully told.

"The Long Week End—A British social history 1918-1939" is by Robert Graves and Alan Hodge. Here the most kaleidoscopic epoch of all time is summed up in one living volume.

Other books worth reading include "The Golden Treasury of Scottish Poetry," a distinguished anthology compiled by Hugh MacDiarmid. "An Introduction to Television" by C. J. Hylander and Robert Harding may be borrowed at the Main Library and also at the South End Branch, located in the Pennsylvania Avenue School, "Your Personality—Introvert or Extrovert" by Virginia Case.

"In the Mill"—an unusual bit of autobiography by John Masfield. Here the poet laureate of England describes the two years he spent working in a carpet mill in Yonkers, New York; the friends he made and his real introduction to reading. "Big Family" by Bellamy Partidge—a thoroughly enjoyable successor to the writer's "Country Lawyer."

James Summers Is Released

American Planes Too Good for Nazis

CAIRO, Oct. 9 (AP)—South African pilots flying American-made Martin bombers were reported here to have beaten off unscathed an attack by the newest German types of planes.

In a ten minute engagement over Japuzzo, on the Libyan-Egyptian frontier, the bomber pilots were credited with sending one of the newest type of Messerschmitt 109's down in flames and damaging another so badly that it probably never reached its base.

The South Africans were returning from a raid when the German fighters attacked.

ST. MARYS, O., Oct. 9 (AP)—Ever near of duck fishing? Neither had Mrs. O. C. Hardin nor Mrs. William Wuss until—the women saw a low-flying duck trailing a fish pole. Stopping the car, they grabbed the pole, drew in the duck and found a fish hook imbedded in its head. Released, the duck flew away.

The women surmised the duck was hooked filching a fish off the line of an angler.

Antidote Is Seen For Mid-Channel Fling of Husband

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX, Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage — Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

"I am writing to you in desperation and because you are a stranger, I know your advice will be sounder than anyone's else," a letter states. "I've been married twelve years to a man who has his own business. Our married life has been more or less stormy, but especially during the last few years."

"At first it was girls and then he started drinking. Now it's both. Believe me, Miss Fairfax, my nerves are near the breaking point, although he doesn't know this."

"We have two children of eight and six, and they hardly ever see their father. He regrets having them. During the past two years he has neglected me completely, and I have taken care of myself and the home to the best of my ability."

Is Lonely

"He has told me he goes with women and tells me to go with other men, but I wouldn't think of it, as my children mean so much more to me than getting myself involved with any man. My husband has told me I am one hundred per cent mother and housekeeper so it can't be because I have neglected my duties. He is 41 and I am 35, although I look younger."

"I long for companionship. My husband comes home late at night and leaves before the children are up in the morning, so he gives me no time. At home he gives me just enough money to see me through. Do you think a separation might awaken him to his responsibility?"

"I don't wonder you're discouraged. Perhaps a separation may awaken your husband to the comforts he enjoys at present. They miss their good housekeeping, these married male butterflies. One wrote to me not long ago, told me he wanted to be reconciled to his wife because he was tired of picking up his own laundry, wearing undarned socks, and going out to his breakfast. A dose of these 'hardships' might be good for your man."

A Sort of Last Call

You tell me he is 41 years of age. This is the "Mid-Channel" for married men, as the playwright Pinero wisely pointed out in his play by that title. They feel age creeping up on them and long for a few last flings. It's a sort of last call for dinner in the dining-car. Even if married life has been stormy, a good wife, out of the depths of her maternal instinct will stand by rather than see the father of her children go over the rocks—as sheep are known to do, once they get started.

I certainly hope, for both your sakes, that you patch things up. A middle-aged man is a fair mark for a gold-digger, and I know you will be happier if you do not break up your home. Always there are children's welfare to be considered. My best wishes to you.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have been a very happy married man for several years and have two children, the youngest a girl of six. Our married life has always been considered perfect by our friends. My wife is a beautiful woman and has been a marvelous mother and housekeeper, always loving her home.

We have had financial reverses, but through it all she has never once complained, and has been devoted, cheering me up whenever I became discouraged. We were poor, but I felt we were rich in love, so I kept plugging on.

About four months ago I learned that my wife had been carrying on an affair with a supposed friend of ours—a married man—for almost a year. I became aware of it when she was suddenly taken ill and almost died. Then she confessed everything but claimed she no longer loves this other man, but swears she loves me now more than she did before.

Naturally it broke me all up, as I had always prided myself on having a beautiful wife in love with me. I still love her; one can't just stop loving anyone on the spur of the moment. However, I find I'm gradually caring less and less for her. I don't know what might happen to her if I divorce her now. I'm so upset. Please advise me what to do.

H. H.

If your wife still loved this man your problem would be less difficult to answer. But as you tell me you love her, though "less and less," wouldn't you be punishing yourself if you were to break with her now? Undoubtedly if you sued for divorce, named this supposed friend as co-respondent, the custody of the children would be given you. But all things considered, could you do as well for them as their mother? And the welfare of the children must be considered. Children are brought into the world through no volition of their own, and the least that parents can do for them is to consider their welfare. I hope you'll forgive your wife of their own, and the least that par-hang back and refer to her one mistake. Read your New Testament and see what the Great Teacher has to say about forgiveness.

Fort Hill and LaSalle Meet Here Tonight

Game Will Open Race for City Championship

Fort Hill Ranks as Slight Favorite over Conway's Eleven

Fort Hill will be beef and brawn against Conway when Coach Johnny Long's Fort Hill Sentinels and Pat Conway's LaSalle Explorers open the city championship football game at 8 o'clock at the Fort Hill stadium.

The Sentinels will outweigh the Explorers and Gold combination and will be slightly favored to open defense.

However, LaSalle follows the Explorers to attempt to push over one or more touchdowns during the early stages of the game and then try to outlast the Explorers.

Fort Hill will go into the skirmish with a record of one victory, two losses and a tie. The Scarlet and Gold lost to Baltimore City College and Pittsburgh South Hills.

Alumni gridders and turned Charlotte Hall Military Academy.

LaSalle scored its initial triumph over the Explorers in a game also manufactured its first victory of the season in upsetting the Fort Hill Cardinals of Baltimore 19-0 last week. Previously, the Explorers were held to a scoreless tie by Moorefield's Yellow Jackets.

Fort Hill's lineup in doubt. Coach Johnny Long said last night that the lineup is indefinite and that he probably won't make his decision until game time. The Sentinels will wear their white jerseys. Scarlet and Gold players will wear their wooden stands.

According to the Hilltop mentor, the Explorers will be selected from Gene Hill, Carl Lapp and Charles Hill. At left tackle will be either Hansel of Wallace Troutman while Jim Snyder or Robert Hill will start at left guard. Paul Hill is sure to get the call at center. Clarence Minnick will be at right guard and Fred Davis or Jim Hill at right tackle will come in the forward wall.

In the backfield, it will be Paul Hill and Joe Montelone at quarterback, Charles Mentzer or George Hill at left half, Marcellus Charnick at right half and Captain Bill Hill at fullback.

According to Conway, only one lineup will be made in LaSalle's lineup array with Bill Schaffer at left and instead of John Schaffer.

The officials will be Eddie Cubber of West Virginia university, Fred, Bob Kyle, Romney, W. V. Moore, and Dan Staley, head lines.

Coming in for a share of the spotlight tonight will be Allegany's game with Hagerstown in the Hub City. A number of Campobello fans expected to make the trip and in the first clash of the season the Cumberland Valley Athletic League.

The kickoff will be at 8 o'clock at Hagerstown's Municipal stadium. The game of night baseball games this summer in the Interstate League.

Herbert Ball of Allegany last night that all his boys are through the clash with Keyser week in good condition and the West Siders are all ready spring their "T" formation on the Semler's Hub City outfit.

Three Conference Games. The Campers, winners over St. Albans of Morgantown, W. V., will be shot for their fourth straight victory over the CVAL lid-lifter, Fort Hill is defending loop champion.

Today's slate also includes three game Valley Conference tests. The game will be played in the afternoon. Parsons Panthers will seek their straight loop triumph against the game at Parsons; Moorefield, of two consecutive conference games, will invade Piedmont, Romney, which has a record of the victory in the wheel, will be the Franklin.

Fort games today are Petersburg, Harpers Ferry, St. Mary's at Keyser Springs, Martinsburg at Keyser and the Handley of Winchester, Va., at Keyser.

The only game on tomorrow's card is a college affair involving Potomac State's Catamounts of Keyser and the Concord Mountain Lions, Keyser, billed as the Cats' morning tussle, will find Coach "Horse" Lough's Keyserites seeking their first victory in four years.

The Muse (Lardner) Again; Winners (Maybe) In Verse

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—At this time, without fear of favor and practically without provocation, we extend you a beautiful lyric message with each and every football winner for the coming Saturday (courtesy of poetic license No. X-107-8-9, inclusive).

The Muse Rides Again
Michigan will outpoint Pitt,
And not by just a little bit.

Meeting Texas: That's a date
Which takes poor Oklahoma
Far from home to a well-known state
Bordering on coma.

When Georgia Tech meets Notre Dame,
And Dixie music fills the air,
Tech has a chance—the very same
A snowball has in you-know-where.

Washington State
By Saturday (date)
Will have won
From Washington.

Rice this year makes tougher chewin';
But Tulane will work her ruin.

Far above Cayuga's waters,
With its waves play for a touchdown
Stands Cornell—and also quite a

From boyhood up, or thereabout,
I thought that I was hard to take,
And that's what Stanford dishes out—
It's Oregon State's mistake.

If someone gives you Illinois
Over Minnesota,
Ask him who he's kidding, boy;
Tell him where to go to.

Yale is off the floor, and Penn
Will straightaway knock her down, again.

Wisconsin hasn't got a chance
With them Northwestern Wildcats.
Them's Lynxes, son; they'll chew your pants;
Them's Tigers; them ain't wild cats.

Here's the dope,
More or less;
Dartmouth? Nope.
Colgate? Yes.

Lafayette is apt to use
Some tricky man-in-motion stuff
On Navy, but the Gobs can't lose;
They've got the real two-ocean stuff.

This is a brutal world for fair;
It's no enchanted fairyland;
In view of which, my friends, prepare
To see Duke butcher Maryland.

No one asked me, true enough,
But I give the Golden Bear a
Less than ever chance with tough,
Rugged little Santa Clara.

Little do my well-fed clients,
Wolfing down their costly dinners,
Know the skill, the football science,
I amply in picking winners.
Syracuse and Holy Cross—(Where's that coin, Miss Glutz?
One toss.
Tail?) I recommend a deuce
On the nose of Syracuse.

Southern Methodist will shoye
Something soporific
Down the throat of the College of
The wide and blue Pacific.

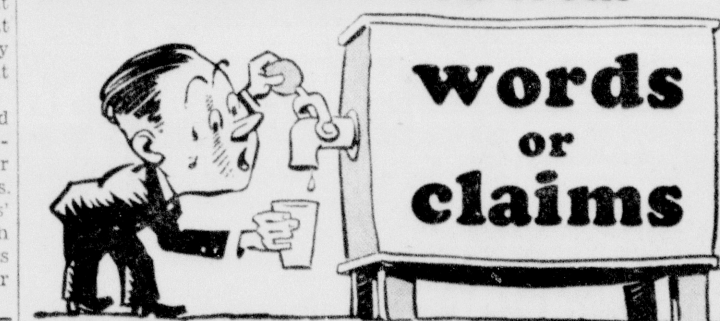

No Holds Barred

We now throw open our fourth annual college rhyming contest for starving, baffled, and misunderstood poets. Any man, woman, child, or pedigreed dog between the ages of 6 and 83 may enter. The winner will receive the Lardner Memorial Trophy, consisting of one (1) suitably engraved dollar ($1) or its equivalent in stamps or mulligan.

In past years we have asked you frustrated bards to rhyme such colleges as Tufts and Williams. This year the word is Hofstra. The best stanza or couplet rhyming Hofstra will carry off the pot of gold ($1).
Entries close November 25.

Just in case you do not believe there is such a college as Hofstra, with a football team which fights like a demon, we will produce proof next week.

Terra Alta Nips Romney Silents By 13-12 Score

Extra Point after Touchdown Provides Margin of Victory

ROMNEY, W. Va.—(Special to the News)—Terra Alta high school's football team defeated the West Virginia Silents today in a well-played, hard-fought game with the result in doubt until the final whistle.

The Silents scored on the first play of the game after the kickoff. Coach Collette's team pulled a "digger" play the first time the boys lined up after Terra Alta kicked off to them, scoring a touchdown when Cook threw a pass to Grabbill.

Terra Alta tied the score in the first quarter driving down the field in a series of plays which started on the fifty yard line, Hoban going over from the four. Hoban put the visitors out in front by making the extra point on a line plunge.

Pass Play Clicks

Hoban set up Terra Alta's second touchdown by throwing a 20 yard pass to Liller who was stopped on the four yard line. Liller went over on the next play for a touchdown but the try for extra point failed.

Romney scored its second touchdown after a series of plays put the ball on the six yard line from where Grabbill took it over. Romney tried placement kicks for extra points after both touchdowns but neither was good. During the second half Romney was within Terra Alta's 20 yard lines three times but was unable to score.

The game was fought on practically even terms from start to finish with Terra Alta making nine first downs and the Silents eight. Terra Alta was penalized 60 yards and Romney 40. Terra Alta tried 13 passes, completed four, three were intercepted and six were incomplete. Romney tried 13 passes, five were completed, two intercepted and six incomplete.

Outstanding star of the game was Grabbill, left halfback for the Silents, who made several long runs and was forced out of bounds several times when he seemed headed for a touchdown. His spirit, determined and fine all-around playing brought prolonged cheers from the crowd.

Reds Release Lloyd Waner

CINCINNATI, Oct. 9.—The Cincinnati Reds today gave outfielder Lloyd Waner his outright release to make room on their roster for twenty-five-year-old Jim Pendergast, southpaw hurler, drafted from Little Rock in the Southern Association.

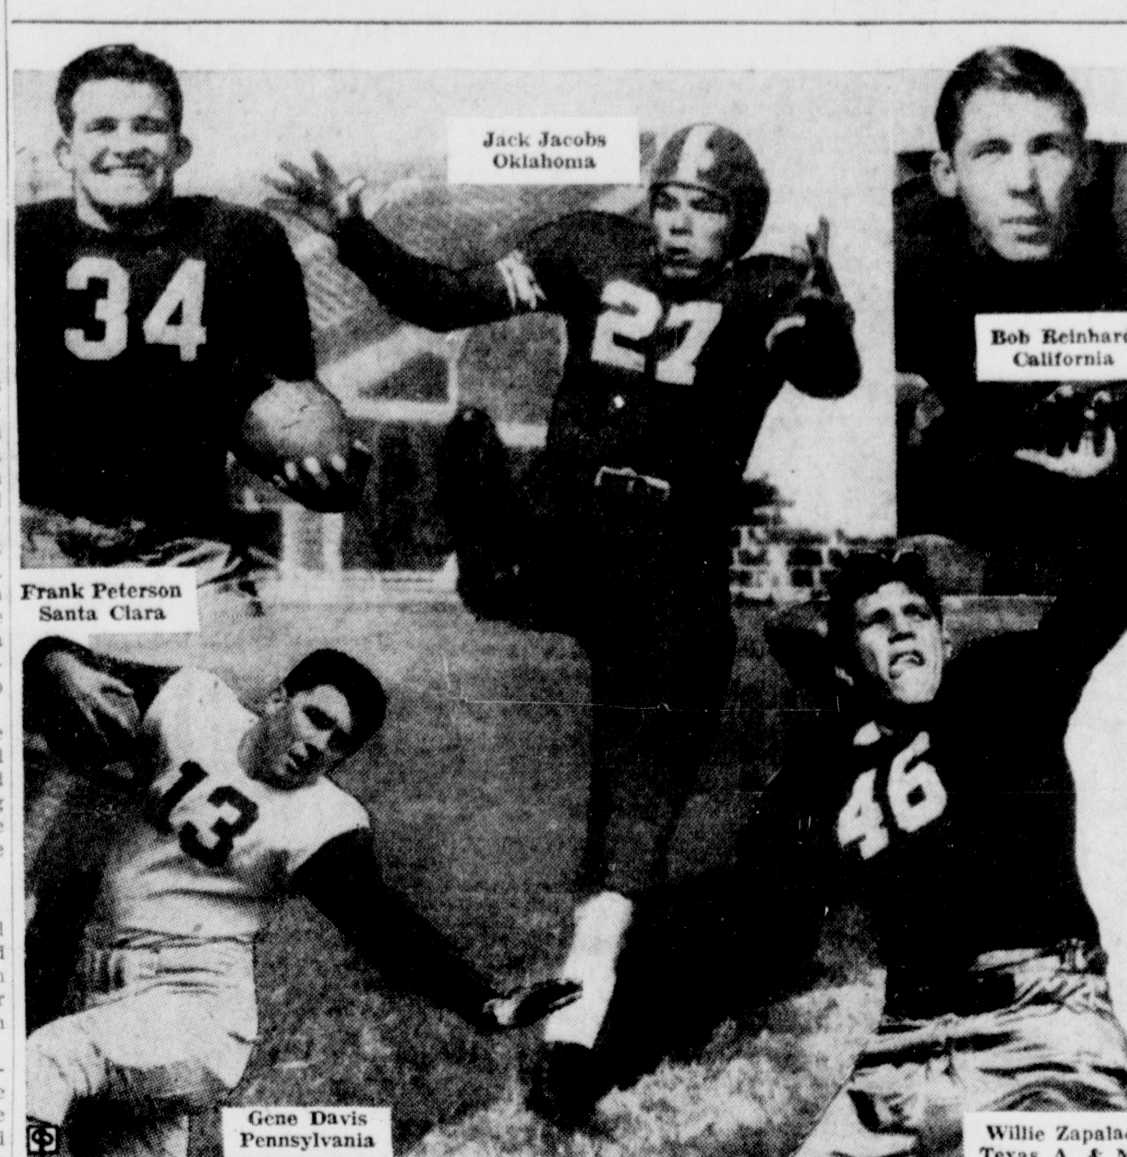

Lloyd and his brother, Paul, were the slugging stars of the Pittsburgh Pirates for many years. Paul came to the Reds last spring from Boston in exchange for Pitcher Johnny Hutchinson, and hit 256 in 164 times at bat with the Reds.

Detroit Hockey Strong, Says Adams

DETROIT, Oct. 9.—In a pointed warning to the rest of the National Hockey League, Manager Jack Adams today termed his Detroit Red Wing aggregation as "the strongest squad we've had since our Stanley Cup winning day."

The Detroit manager expressed this optimism at the Wings' first 1941 practice session for which twenty-four players turned out, including Wilbert (Dutch) Hiller, left winger purchased from the New York Rangers last spring.

TEXAS-OKLAHOMA GAME TOPS THIS WEEK'S CARD

Important struggle between two of the nation's finest teams, Oklahoma and Texas, tops the football card for Saturday, Oct. 11. Intersectional games also will merit a share of the spotlight. These are headed by Notre Dame at Georgia Tech, Clemson at Boston college, Texas Christian at Indiana, Texas A. & M. at New York U., Pitt at Michigan and Fordham at North Carolina. Other games of importance are the clashes between Harvard and Cornell, Dartmouth and Colgate, Yale and Pennsylvania, California and Santa Clara and Rice and Tulane.

Texas A and M To Play N.Y.U. On Saturday

Winstead Says "Dennis Andricks Is Our Next John Kimbrough"

NEW YORK, Oct. 9 (AP)—Thirty young men, five of them taking their first train ride, were rolling toward New York tonight for their first look at the big city and to give the big city its first look at a Texas A. & M. football team in many a moon.

The Aggies, a by-word of the nation last year, meet New York university here Saturday, and chunky, baldish Byron Winstead, who came ahead as a carrier pigeon to bring tidings of the invasion from the Southwest, doesn't know quite what to expect, although he admits Homer Norton has practically a senior team, and has a reasonable facsimile of Jarrin 'Jawn Kimbrough.

"It's a green senior team," he hastened to explain. "Practically all these fellows picked up bench splinters the last two years as the regulars put in almost full time. Seven of our regulars last year were 60-minute men, and got mad if they were taken out."

TOUGHEST OF THE WEEK

Texas to take Oklahoma.

Columbia to beat Princeton.

Navy Gridders Are Eligible

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Oct. 9 (AP)—Swede Larson breathed a big sigh of relief today after he learned that his entire Navy squad will be eligible for those big football games with Cornell, Harvard, Pennsylvania, Notre Dame, Princeton and Army.

His charges took examinations just before the opening clash with William and Mary and it wasn't until today that the results were announced. He said during examination time operation of his two-team system depended upon the outcome of the examinations.

Larson said he may start his second outfit, captained by Dick Opp, tackle, against Lafayette's Leopards here Saturday. The second eleven, sparked by brilliant Howie Clark, last Saturday started the Middles' attack rolling with the first touchdown against West Virginia.

Today the Middles participated in a dummy scrimmage against the "B" squad which used Lafayette plays. Later the Varsity was drilled in pass defense.

Jersey Obtains O'Hagan

JERSEY CITY, Oct. 9 (AP). The Jersey City Giants defending champions in the American Pro Football Association, announced today the acquisition of Marty O'Hagan, former University of Portland back, from the New York Giants, of the National Football League.

Maryland Prepares For Blue Devils

COLLEGE PARK, Md., Oct. 9 (AP)—University of Maryland sought today in a lengthy practice session to get two full units in good working order for the Terp football battle Saturday in Baltimore with the Duke Blue Devils.

Duke advised Maryland coaches a squad of twenty-four players would come North for the Southern Conference tilt with Maryland, to be played in the stadium at Baltimore. Realizing the power of Duke's squad, Maryland hustled two elevens through a wide variety of plays, both passing and running, then took a look at the tricky Blue Devils' offense the Terrapins will be called upon to face.

Bob James, sophomore left end, and reserve fullback Jack Mier, both recovering from injuries, appeared in far from 100 per cent condition but both doubtless will see action Saturday.

Coach Wallace Wade of Duke will run his charges through a final workout tomorrow at Durham before enroute for Baltimore. The Blue Devils will arrive Saturday morning.

Alsab May Not Run In Pimlico Special

LAUREL, Md., Oct. 9 (AP)—A decision on whether or not Alsab, sensational two-year-old colt, will run in the Pimlico Special Oct. 30, probably will not be made until next week, trainer Gus (Sarge) Swenke said today.

Swenke said he would go Monday to Lexington, Ky., to cover with the colt's owner, Mrs. Albert Sabath of Chicago, and her husband about Alsab's campaign. Mr. and Mrs. Sabath, he said, would attend the yearling sales at Lexington.

Even if the Sabaths should decide to run the youngster against older horses in the Special, Alsab is expected to keep his engagement in the Spalding Lowe Jenkins Handicap here Oct. 18.

Bill Dudley Is Man of the Week In Grid Ratings

Virginia Senior Rates First on Total Offense in the Country

By GAIL FOWLER

SEATTLE, Oct. 9 (AP)—Bill Dudley, the man of the hour in Virginia football, became the man of the week in the American Football Statistical Bureau's first weekly individual ground-gain compilations today.

Dudley, who as a junior last year was named as a back on the Associated Press Third team All-American, this week rates first in total offense—gains both rushing and passing—second in rushing alone, and fifth as a forward passer.

In 43 rushes he made 281 yards. He completed 12 out of 20 passes, with one interception, for 117 yards, and totaled 398 yards in 63 ball-handling attempts while his team was winning two of its first three games, losing only to Yale, 21-19.

Grigas of Holy Cross is the top rusher, collecting 328 yards in 49 tries. Cantini of Carnegie Tech completed the most passes, hitting the target 20 times in 52 attempts with one interception, for 265 yards. The bureau ranks passers on the number of completions. On a percentage basis, Dudley's 12 out of 20 gave him a 60 per cent rating to lead in that classification among the top five.

Auburn, for the past few years one of the nation's best punting teams, boasts this week's punting leader in Gafford, whose five points in two games averaged 48 yards apiece.

Four players head the pass smatching department with eight apiece. Ranked secondarily according to yards gained, they are Keating, Detroit, 122 yards; Spivey, Texas A. & M., 107; Anderson, Carnegie Tech, 105, and Henderson, Texas A. & M., 72.

Other leaders:
Total offense—(gains rushing and passing)—After Dudley comes Sinkewick, Georgia, 371 yards; Moser, Texas A. & M., 352; Grigas, Holy Cross, 328; Cantini, Carnegie Tech, 322; Madarik, Detroit, 309; Weber, St. Louis, 270; Porto, Creighton, 265; Pete Layden, Texas, 235, and Thomas, Tulane, 210.

Yost System Comes Back To Aid Michigan

1941 Eleven Has Fine Defense; Is Weak Offensively

Team To Play for Touchdown and Try To Hold Its Opponent

By EARL HILLIGAN

CHICAGO, Oct. 9 (AP)—That famed old football system of Fielding H. Yost's heyday—"a punt, a pass and a prayer"—has come back to aid the team which made it renowned—Michigan's Wolverines.

In retirement now is Michigan's grand old man, "Hurry Up" Yost. Gone from the Michigan scene are Tom Harmon and Forest Evashevski. Carrying on now for Coach Fritz Crisler is an eleven operating in a manner strongly reminiscent of great Yost teams of the past.

Kuzma Is Good Punter

Michigan today seems to have what many of those past great teams had: A deadly punter, a fine fullback, a knack of scoring six or seven points and then—behind a stonewall defense—during the opposition to do its worst.

Last Saturday, Iowa decided Michigan both in first downs and yards gained by rushing. The final score was Michigan 6, Iowa 0—just as many times in other years when opponents won the statistical honors and the Wolverines the ball game. Michigan scored those six points in the first period. Then, behind a great line, Michigan held on to the final gun. That line averages 192 pounds—on six foot frames. Harlan Fraumann and Joe Rogers, ends; Al Wistert, left tackle; Bob Kolesar and Bill Melzow, guards; and Bob Ingalls, center—all are fine forwards.

Kicks for Sidelines

In the backfield, Michigan has a splendid fullback in Bob Westfall and in Tom Kuzma not only a hard driving runner but a fine punter. Against Iowa he booted four kicks out of bounds inside the five yard stripe. Yost used to say: "You gotta big edge, son, with a good kicker and those two extra men—the out of bounds lines—on your side."

Michigan as yet hasn't a passer of the ability of Harmon, Benny Friedman or Harry Newman. Those last two hark back to some great "punt, pass and prayer" days. Even before Friedman was firing his shots to Benny Osterbaum, Michigan teams were scoring and then holding on for wins behind great defenses led by such Wolverine greats as Jack Blott, Edliff slaughterer, Franklin Cappon, and that punter extraordinary, Harry Kipke.

"It looks as though Michigan, while seeking another fast attack, which marked Harmon's three years, is successfully using the old system of a tight defense," said Herb Steger, veteran Big Ten official, who played with Kipke and who scored both Michigan touchdowns that memorial 1924 year when Red Grange led Illinois to a 39 to 14 triumph at Champaign.

"And while loss of Harmon and Evashevski hurt any team," he added, "I think that man for man this Michigan team is better than that of 1940. When stars go, teamwork improves. They're going to be tough."

Northwestern, Minnesota, Illinois, Purdue and Ohio State are ready to believe that right now.

He's better right now than John was as a soph. He's our No. 2 fullback now, but give him time.

Winstead declared the Aggies have a good team now, but it needs knacks.

"I can't compare it to last year's," he explains, "because last year's team was a climax team, achieved after three years of building. These fellows all scrimmaged against our team last year, and they may turn out to be just as good eventually."

The Aggies are passing more this year, he added, because they have some corking ends, big fellows who can snare a ball, fellows like six-foot-four Bill Henderson and six-foot-two Jim Sterling. Sterling and halfback Moses Moser are the only holdover regulars from last year.

Groping for a comparison which might give the fans an idea of the strength of this year's still mystery eleven, Winstead came up with this: "I'd say it is potentially as good a ball club as our 1939 team, and is better right now than the 1939 team was at a similar stage of the season."

The 1939 team was good enough to win a bowl game in 1940, and again in 1941.

Late News Events as Pictured by the Cameramen

OUT OF THE WEST—As comely a lot of cowgirls as ever rode N. Y. ranges will appear in Madison Square Garden rodeo. Left to right, and all contest winners: Marion Rich, 18, Miss West Texas; Ada Perner, 19, Miss Arizona; Jean Claussen, 18, Miss Northern California; Betty Goodan, 17, Miss Southern California; Marcellaise Rich, 19, Miss Texas; Mary Mercer, 19, Miss Sun Valley.

PREPAREDNESS POLICY—Window Cleaner Al Oromaner (standing), who scales skyscraper heights in Rockefeller Center, N. Y., never meets any thugs who want to argue with him on a window ledge 20 stories up, but that doesn't mean Oromaner isn't prepared. He's a ju-jitsu expert in his spare time and can handle almost any opponent. This is but a practice session.

'DOGWATCH' AT PINE CAMP—No place in the fire station at Pine Camp, N. Y., home of the Fourth armored division, is as home-like to Izzy, the duck, as the big suction hose. Izzy and Nicky, the pup, are mascots of the fire station.

YOU SHOULD SEE THEM IN WATER—Heading for the sea off Dunedin, Fla., several Roebling amphibian tanks prove they're landlubbers, too. The rough-riding tanks can carry 40 men, operate in mud, water and on land. Donald Roebling invented them.

PROOF OF THE FISHING—For 36 minutes Gilbert Schneider (left) battled this 171-pound marlin swordfish off Santa Catalina, using rod and reel. Lyle Bagnard (right) was gaff-man.

LAW CHOICE—Walter F. Armstrong (above), 57, who has been practicing law in Memphis, Tenn., since 1908, is new president of the American Bar Association, named at its convention in Indianapolis. He succeeds Jacob M. Lashly of St. Louis.

TAPS BY BOJANGLES—To the tune of "When That Man Is Dead and Gone," Bill (Bojangles) Robinson tap-danced on a coffin at a rally staged in N. Y. by Fight for Freedom, Inc., and attended by 15,000 persons who in the course of the evening saw the swastika-marked mock funeral procession, went through a mock air raid, and heard speeches by Wilkie, Knudsen, LaGuardia.

GOOD INFLUENCE—Because 27 pigeons in the U.S. Army Signal Corps exhibit at the Civilian and National Defense Exposition in N. Y. were pinning, Mac (above), Corps' handsome red checker homing pigeon was sent from Fort Monmouth, N. J.

FIRST TIME—Two new associate justices, James F. Byrnes (left) and Robert H. Jackson (right), took their places on the U.S. Supreme Court bench for the first time Oct. 6 when the court's fall session began, with Harlan Fiske Stone as chief justice.

ROMANCE?—This is Thurkel (Turk) Greenough, 26, the rugged rodeo rider from Red Lodge, Mont., whose name has been linked (by Sally) romantically with that of Sally Rand.

EXTRA SPECIAL—When Leslie Norman of Tacoma, Wash., saw some sailors walking through the front gate of a movie studio in Hollywood he just followed them in, and what happened? He got on the set of a navy film, played in one scene before being discovered and even collected above handsome pay for his work as an "extra" from Barbara Slater (left), Katherine Booth.

QUEEN—California fig growers had a queen, shapely Dolores Hunter of Fresno, to reign during California Figarden Day, as part of the jolly events at Fresno county fair.

Council To Meet Today To Discuss Labor Agreement

Labor Representative Irked; Municipal Employees To Hold Session

A meeting of the mayor and city council will be held this morning at 10:30 o'clock for the purpose of discussing a proposed labor agreement for employees in the street and alley and water departments, which was recommended by Commissioners William J. Edwards and Edgar H. Reynolds, and submitted to the council at its regular session last Monday.

The meeting was called last evening by Mayor Irvine following a visit yesterday of John Busby, international representative of the Hod Carriers, Building and Common Laborers Union, of Washington, D. C.

Busby, accompanied by a committee of the local municipal employees' union, marched into the city hall at 2 p. m., and said they came to discuss the agreement with the mayor and council.

No Meeting Arranged

Irvine informed them that no meeting had been arranged, that Commissioner Edwards was out of town and that there will be no meeting with municipal employees until the eight-point program submitted by Commissioners Edwards and Reynolds is thoroughly discussed by the council.

"We have certain obligations to fulfill and we can't go into this agreement blindly," Irvine told Busby.

When Busby recalled that the matter was before the council several months and added that it's about time the buck passing ceased, Irvine declared, "I want you to understand that I am not passing the buck. Many confusing statements have been made in regard to our dealings with the employees and it's entirely in the council's hands to thrash out the matter."

Busby stated that he expressly came 200 miles from Parkersburg, W. Va., to attend the meeting, which he said was scheduled for 2 p. m. yesterday in city hall.

Tells Employees To Meet

Turning to a member of the municipal employees' committee as he left the mayor's office, Busby declared, "Tell the boys to call a meeting for next Monday night."

It was learned last night that Busby and members of the municipal employees union will meet Monday at 7:30 p. m. in the P. O. Eagles home, North Mechanic street.

The eight-point program on wages and working conditions, submitted at Monday's council meeting, but action was tabled until next week.

Recommendations Given

In a statement to the council on Monday, Commissioners Edwards and Reynolds said that they find that no valid labor agreement as such, may be entered into by the mayor and council, with a labor union. Certain things, however, incorporated in the said agreement, the councilmen said, impressed them as being fair and equitable, and they recommended the following program.

1. Inasmuch as an increased scale of wages went into effect as of the fifteenth day of July, and said increased scale of wages was based upon the utmost amount of money available under current city budgets which cannot be altered by a law, it is recommended that the current scale be retained.

2. It is further recommended that the standard eight-hour day, not to exceed forty-five hours in any one week, be fixed as the standard work week for employees in the water and street departments.

3. It is recommended that time and one-half for overtime be paid for all work in excess of eight hours in any one working day.

4. It is recommended that the fourth of July, Labor day, and Christmas day, and any other day officially observed by the City of Cumberland as a holiday, fixed by law or by proclamation of the president, governor or the mayor, shall be observed in these departments, without pay, as to hourly employees. If not in the event any men are required to work on any of said days fixed as holidays, then it is recommended that the men be paid time and one-half time for such hours as they are actually worked on said days, time and one-half time for hours actually worked be paid for any Sunday work.

5. It is recommended that any city employee, employed upon an hourly basis, who has been continuously in the employ of the city not less than one year prior thereto, and whose record discloses steady working time, be allowed one week's vacation with pay, to be computed at the normal hourly rate of pay multiplied by forty-five.

Opportunities Cited

6. It is recommended further that an alphabetical list of the men in the street department and a separate alphabetical list of the men in the water department be prepared and posted, and that opportunities for extra employment, whereby the men may earn extra compensation, be afforded to the men in alphabetical order, so that such extra work will be fairly proportioned among them.

7. It is recommended that employees employed at any given rate of pay who is transferred to any class of work paying a higher rate of pay shall be paid at a higher rate of pay during the time of said transfer.

8. It is recommended that the

Progress in Educational System Is Explained by Charles L. Kopp

Divides Criticism of Public Schools into Three Classifications

Charles L. Kopp, superintendent of Allegheny county public schools, gave an instructive address on "Education Is Different Now" yesterday at noon to the Kiwanis Club at its weekly luncheon-meeting at the Port Cumberland hotel.

Criticism of public schools has been made in most periods of this country's history, Kopp said, and they are divided into three classifications.

First the chronic knocker, to whom every public act which does not immediately enhance his own welfare is vicious, corrupt or an unnecessary extravagance. His number is small but rather vocal and raucous, Kopp added.

Specialists Are Critical

Second is the individual who is a specialist in almost every field of endeavor; he knows how to run a farm, how every department of city,

Preliminary Plans Are Discussed For Red Cross Annual Roll Call

Co-ordinated Program of Publicity Will Depict Various Activities

Preliminary plans were discussed last night by the publicity chairman for the Allegheny County Red Cross Roll Call which opens November 11 and closes November 30 during which time it is hoped to enroll 15,000 members in the organization.

This year the Junior Red Cross Roll Call will be held in conjunction with the regular roll call. The aid of county schools and their publications has been asked to further this phase of the drive.

Plans Are Devised

Among plans set up, last night were a co-ordinated program of publicity in which newspapers, radio, and other mediums will present the work of the Red Cross before the general public. Two films will be shown in local theaters depicting Red Cross activities such as fire, flood, disasters, field work among army, navy and other armed forces and first aid work.

One of the films is entitled "Under Two Flags" with Edwin C. Hill, noted newspaper man and radio commentator, as narrator. This film is said to be one of the best explanations of Red Cross work so far shown.

F. Allen Weatherholt, chairman of the Publicity committee, said last night the recent disaster on North Centre street brought home the very vital part which the Red Cross plays in any community. Many persons were given an insight into what is necessary in such a trying time and how the Red Cross can best meet such emergencies. One of the ways in which everyone can aid in this work is by enrolling in the Red Cross, Weatherholt said.

Committee chairmen who will work in the campaign are Capt. Richard P. Shireman, of the state guards; John Schaidt, of the Times and Allegheny Company, who will direct window displays in the downtown section; John Storer, will direct window displays in South Cumberland.

Brig. B. L. Phillipson, of the Salvation Army, will work with Cumberland ministers in arranging suitable sermons for Red Cross Sunday, November 9, in Cumberland churches. Jane McManis, of the Allegheny high school Alcohol Mirror staff and Mrs. Dorothy Spates, faculty advisor of the Fort Hill high school Sentinel will work with the high school part of the campaign.

John L. Towler will direct outdoor advertising. David H. Murrie and Margaret Coulehan, of radio station WTKO.

Two Appeal Cases Tried by Juries In Circuit Court

Frostburg Suit Is Upheld while Local Verdict Is Reversed

A jury in circuit court yesterday affirmed a decision handed down in trial magistrates' court in Frostburg by Magistrate Owen Porter in favor of Louis Edmunds and Charles Eberly against Charles Burton who sued to recover damages incident to dismantling an old-fashioned iron fence around Edmunds' property.

Testimony revealed that Burton approached Edmunds with a proposal to tear down the fence in return for the iron railings. This was done, according to Edmunds' counsel, Edward J. Ryan, but two marble posts were left in place.

Several days later Eberly offered to buy the posts but Edmunds told him he could have them if he would remove them himself. This was done. Later Burton sued both men for allegedly taking "his property," Ryan said.

Charles G. Watson, attorney for Burton, alleged the marble posts were the property of Burton due to the verbal agreement between his client and Edmunds. The jury returned its verdict after a short deliberation.

A verdict handed down in trial magistrates' court, this city, by Magistrate Frank A. Perdue was reversed yesterday morning. The jury returned a verdict of $150 damages to Harry T. Russell, Sr., and Harry T. Russell, Jr., against Eston Broadwater for damages in an auto-truck collision in Barton last February.

Elmo B. Gower and H. G. Shores, Keyser, W. Va., attorneys, represented the Russells while Edward J. Ryan, attorney, was counsel for Broadwater.

Many complaints have been received from residents of Prince George street since last spring when the WPA, after constructing curbs, gutters and sidewalks and grading the street, transferred its workers to the airport project in Wiley Ford, W. Va.

The street, according to Heller, is 1,275 feet long. Fifteen men are employed on the project which will require about twenty-four working days to complete.

City workers under the supervision of Heller, completed laying 1,000 eight-inch terra cotta sewer pipe on Kent avenue.

Daniel D'Amico will act as moderator. The program will be the second of a series of thirty-three sponsored by the Club of Human Relations.

Farm Bureau Plans For Annual Banquet

Harry Barton, Caleb J. White, and A. J. Fitch were named on the committee on arrangements. A prominent speaker will be secured for the event.

Experts Conclude Probe into Blast On Centre Street

Rutledge and Huff Leave City; Typists Work Late Preparing Testimony

Taking of testimony in the two-day investigation of the explosion of Thursday, October 2, that injured twenty-five persons, two fatally, was concluded yesterday in city hall.

No conclusion in the investigation was announced last evening. It was learned at city hall that Dr. Wilbert J. Huff, of the University of Maryland chemical engineering department and Dr. J. J. Rutledge, chief of the Maryland Bureau of Mines, returned to Baltimore last evening. Eight persons were questioned yesterday by Rutledge, Huff and Ralph L. Rizer, city engineer.

Mayor Harry Irvine and City Attorney Charles Z. Heskett yesterday morning discussed the possibility of turning the accident into an improvement by widening North Centre street.

The work of razing the buildings adjoining the scene of the blast will be started today or tomorrow, it was reported yesterday at city hall.

The result of the investigation here will be turned over to Governor Herbert R. O'Connor, it was said.

Two of the victims of last Thursday's explosion are in a "fair" condition; others are improving slowly in local hospitals.

Theodore Hersberger, 53, Cresap-town, suffering internal injuries, a fractured right leg and burns about the face and arms, has shown some improvement but his condition is still described as "fair" by attaches of Memorial hospital.

Thomas M. Bareis, 41, 225 Fayette street, who suffered a lacerated right cheek, lacerated elbows and abrasions, is still in a "fair" condition in Memorial hospital.

Library Has Story by Minnesota Youth Who Saw Service with the RAF

Other Books Dealing with Current War May Be Found on List

Three new books touching various phases of the current European war have been added to the list at the Cumberland Free Public Library.

The most interesting is "Tally Ho! Yankee in a Spitfire" by Pilot Officer Gerald Donahue, RAF, a personal story of a Minnesota farm youth who was the first American to see combat with the RAF. "Tally Ho" is the young pilot's account of his experiences from the day he enlisted.

Graphic Account of Air War

He writes in a simple direct way and gives a graphic account of flying technique and battle. This is said to be the first book about the RAF written by a pilot. "Tally Ho" may be borrowed at the main library and also at the South End library station.

The other two books touching on the war are "Scum of the Earth"

Cumberland Man May Get Markey's Post with Army

Lieut. Col. George Henderson Expected To Receive Promotion

Lieut. Col. George Henderson, of Cumberland, intelligence officer of the Twenty-ninth division, is expected to succeed Col. D. John Markey, as commanding officer of the One Hundred and Fifteenth Infantry, according to an Associated Press dispatch last evening from Camden, S. C.

The report came on the heels of an announcement by the Second Army Corps headquarters, through the public relations office at Camden, that Col. Markey has been relieved of his present duties and assigned to corps headquarters.

Two lieutenant colonels and two majors were also relieved and given new duties at headquarters. Col. Markey, whose home is in Frederick, Md., has been ill since Sunday when he suffered a fainting spell. At fifty-eight, he is overage for duty in his rank with troops in the field.

Others affected were Lieut. Col. Graham B. Bright, of the inspector general's department with headquarters with the Twenty-Ninth division; Lieut. Col. Roy H. Uhlirer of the One Hundred and Seventy-Sixth field artillery; Major Marshall P. Fletcher, whose headquarters was with the Twenty-Ninth division, and Major William N. Briscoe of the One Hundred and Fourth Quartermaster regiment.

No official statement was made but the public relations office said it believed all were transferred because of age.

Major Sidney Morgan is expected to succeed Lieut. Col. Henderson.

Col. Markey commanded a machine gun battalion in the eleventh regiment, the old Maryland regiment, in the World War.

Col. Henderson is a former mayor of Cumberland and has served with the Maryland National Guard from 1916 until early this year when the militia was inducted into federal service.
